Mr. Hoover Will Work Bad Crops, Lack of Work The South Offers Help Chicago's Air Races

By Arthur Brisbane—

PRESIDENT HOOVER gives up his Western vacation trip, much needed, to remain in Washington for the rest of the hot season, directing the drought relief campaign.

The trip to the Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks is postponed for a year.

There are two bad features in the drought. First, the lack of rain prevents the growth of crops. Second, the lack of moisture encourages insect life, promoting diseases that destroy plants.

All countries, except Russia, Italy and France, complain of unemployment. Canada is worried about 200,000 out of work. Their trouble is small, compared with our idle 5,000,000. The worst is not the unemployment, but the fact that nobody, from the government down, knows what is the matter with the world.

In 1914 Europe went on a murderous debauch, killing millions, spending tens of billions. Then, thanks to the billions poured out, there was a great "prosperity boom." Now, apparently, the nations are paying for the debauch.

You can't kill millions and burn up billions, without regretting it soon or late.

However, this country has more money than it can use, its industries are more highly developed than ever, its people have learned to need things and buy them.

The right idea probably could put this country back into its stride. But nobody seems to have that idea.

Reports made for the President concerning the drought reveal wide devastation, gigantic loss.

The corn crop, it is said, will be reduced 600,000,000 bushels, and one pessimist says "The farmer has nothing to sell but his wheat, and he can't get any price for that."

Perhaps that will improve.

The hospitable South offers relief to farmers whose cattle and sheep lack pasture. In some instances it is said Western sheep owners are selling "the whole critter for 75 cents."

Georgia has offered to President Hoover spendid pastures, green with sufficient rainfall.

Mr. Spencer, of Columbia, S. C., president of the First Carolinas Joint Stock Land Bank, wires to this column:

"Kindly tell stricken people in drought area that lower South Carolina has enjoyed abundant rain, and offers thousands of acres adaptable for pasturage. Pastures not fenced now, can be fenced on short notice. Labor plentiful. The State has the largest and best corn crop in years."

It is pleasant to hear some good news.

At the Chicago air races beginning August 23, at least 2000 planes will appear. Admiral Byrd, Capt. Hawks, and many beautiful, daring women fliers, Amy Johnson, Amelia Earhart, Elinor Smith, Louise Heden, Ruth Elder Camp and others, will be there.

If flying interests you, and it should interest all but hoptoads, attend that greatest of air meetings in Chicago.

Lord Dawson of Penn, physician to King George, King of England and Emperor of India, says prohibition is "illogical."

It is, said he, "illogical to prohibit all use of alcoholic beverages because some indulge to excess."

In America, where many connect our "noble experiment," prohibition, with our ignoble crime wave, some think that prohibition is worse than "illogical."

The noble lord adds: "Because some men love well, rather than wisely, are we going to cease our worship of Venus? Because speech sometimes maddens us, are we to ordain silence?"

The answer for the United States is: "You may be right, but none the less, prohibition will be, nominally at least, the law in America for many a year."

In Paris a rich American wishing to try some ideas of his own NOT on himself, advertised for "a Russian couple without children, and of excellent family to develop a new theory."

A Russian doctor applying was told that the rich theorist wished to try out vegetarian "back to nature" theories. The couple, to be hired for $200 a month, were expected to eat only bananas, drink nothing but tomato juice, walk always on their hands and feet, eat and sleep irregularly about a dozen times a day, no long meals or long sleep, no meat, no alcohol.

The Russian doctor declined the job, for himself and wife.

Tufts Student Loses His Life in Charles

Pitched 30 feet into the Charles river with four other men, when a painters' staging under Harvard bridge collapsed, Herman Merchant, 24, Tufts College senior, lost his life today.

Scores of autos were passing over the bridge when the tragedy occurred, but the first inkling passersby had of the accident was when fire apparatus and police reserves, called by other workmen, reached the scene.

Merchant, who was working for a contractor for the summer to earn funds for his final school year, lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Merchant, at 1090 Massachusetts ave., Arlington.

The other four men, who swam ashore after waiting in vain for their fellow workman to appear on the surface, were William Ried of 156 Washington st., Somerville; James Conway, 32 Neptune rd., East Boston; Frank Byrne of Market st., Brighton, and Thomas O'Connell of 102 Saratoga st., East Boston.

A large crowd lined the rail to watch efforts to recover the body in which firemen and police of Cambridge, Boston and the Metropolitan District participated.

James Driscoll of Horace st., East Boston, son of Special Officer James Driscoll of police headquarters, and Frank Day of Telegraph st., South Boston both of whom were at work on another staging, shouted to a pedestrian to call the police and then joined Byrne and O'Connell in diving for Merchant.

Ladder 15 and engine 33 were sent to the scene and the firemen lowered ladders from the bridge railing. Mounted Policemen George Cassell and Stephen McGrail, first to arrive, rigged ropes and helped drag the river bed.

When the body was recovered by Metropolitan police in boats, two doctors who had been called said it was too late for resuscitation, as Merchant had evidently died from the head wound.

SMASH RECORD IN ENDURANCE FLIGHT

St. Louis Airmen Intend to Keep Right on Going for 1000-Hour Mark

Lambert-St. Louis Field, St. Louis, Aug. 13 (AP)—The veteran endurance team, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, flew through rain and the threat of a storm today to a new world's record for sustained flight.

They officially regained the record at 11:52 a. m. (E. D. T.), when they had been up 554 hours and 41 minutes, slightly more than 23 days.

The new mark exceeded by one full hour the record established last July 4 at Chicago by Kenneth and John Hunter, Illinois farm boys, who, after several attempts, had wrested the flight championship from Jackson and O'Brine. The latter pair set a 420-hour record July 31, 1929.

At 4:52 p. m. they had flown for nearly 560 hours and had exceeded the old record by five hours.

SET 1000-HOUR GOAL

With the record regained, Jackson and O'Brien had no thought of landing, but drove on toward a goal which they now have set at 1000 hours, or about six weeks.

A downpour of rain deluged the field and soaked the scant crowd of

AT JUST EIGHT MINUTES before 12 o'clock, noon, Boston time, today, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine again became champion refueling duration fliers. St. Louis lost the honor to Chicago, now St. Louis has recaptured the endurance crown. You see their plane above. Below are the two fliers. They will keep right on flying and have set their goal at 1000 hours in the air. (International photos.)

Hawks Beating Lindy's Record on Long Hop

Indianapolis, Aug. 13 (AP)—Capt. Frank Hawks reached Indianapolis at 1:22 p. m. (C. S. T.) on his attempt to set a new west-to-east transcontinental air record. He left in a few minutes for New York.

Wichita, Kas., Aug. 13 (AP)—Capt. Frank Hawks, attempting to recapture the west-east transcontinental flight record wrested from him last Easter by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, started off on the last half of his journey today with success in sight.

The flier arrived here from Glendale, Cal., at 10:20:38 a. m., clipping 52 minutes from the time required by the Lindberghs to reach Wichita, the only stop they made on their dash to New York.

Hawks remained here 15 minutes while his plane was refueled and departed at 10:35:52 a. m., with Indianapolis as his next stop. His time to Wichita was six hours, four minutes and 11 seconds.

Tidal winds favored the flier and he expressed confidence that he would lower the transcontinental mark of 14 hours and 45 minutes established by the Lindberghs.

CAPTURED AS HE TRIES TO GET JOB IN HOSPITAL

Youth Thought to Be Hurley Held for Identification by Bay State Officer

A youth believed to be Paul Hurley, 20, Pittsburgh student wanted for the murder of Patrolman Joseph P. O'Brien of Brookline, was arrested today in New York.

He was taken into custody when he applied for work at a Brooklyn hospital, according to the Associated Press. Hurley is known to have worked in a hospital before coming to Boston.

Brookline and Boston police were notified of the arrest and it was expected Sergt. John F. Donovan of Brookline would leave for New York tonight to identify the suspect, said to answer Hurley's description in many details.

SOUGHT SINCE AUG. 5.

Hurley has been sought since August 5. Patrolman O'Brien was shot down in Ivy st., Brookline, on the night of August 3 while attempting to search two young men he suspected of being automobile thieves, but not until two days later did police learn the identity of his assailants.

Gordon Wilson, who shared a Hemenway st., Back Bay, apartment with them, told the authorities Hurley and Thomas G. Healey, 19, also a Pittsburgh student, had committed the crime.

As a result of information given them by Wilson, Healey was arrested the following day when he stepped from a Boston bus in Times sq., New York. He readily admitted being present at the shooting and named Hurley as the actual slayer.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Hurley, he said, had told him to go to New York, that he would follow. A police watch on a place where Healey said he was to meet Hurley had a negative result and Healey was brought back to face a first degree murder charge.

A warrant charging him with murder also stands against Hurley.

The pair came to Boston to work for the summer, Healey said. Healey lost his job as a bell hop in a Beacon Hill hotel and they decided it would be easy to "stick up stores," he confessed.

They were on the first step of their career in crime when Patrolman O'Brien stopped and questioned them.

The committee in charge of the fund for the widow and the child of Patrolman O'Brien announced today that $3262.25 had been received.

A ball game will be held tomorrow night at Brookline Field by the All Stars, members of the Brookline Twilight League teams, and the Brighton police baseball team. Several other plans are in the making to help swell the fund.

CURB RUM EVIL BATTLE CRY OF EX-GOV. FOSS IN SENATE RACE

IN FIGHT TO FINISH ON DRY PLANK

Predict Race for Nomination Rests Among O'Brien, Coolidge and O'Connell

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

With former Governor Eugene N. Foss indicating today that he will stay in the race as an Out-and-Out dry candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, prohibition comes to the front as the outstanding issue of the party primary.

Communicated with today at his summer home in Cohasset the "Old Boy" was at first reluctant to discuss the situation.

"Then he added:

"The people want a dry candidate on the Democratic ticket so they drafted me. Good-bye."

"Can't you elaborate on that a little?" he was asked.

"Good-by," Foss repeated again.

SEE LITTLE HOPE.

Most political observers, however, see little hope for Foss or anyother dry candidate being successful in any Democratic contest. The real fight in the senatorial set-to, it is believed, will be between Marcus A. Coolidge, Fitchburg manufacturer; former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell and former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien.

With Martin Lomasney and Mayor O'Brien, a hectic campaign between the candidate and O'Connell is certain.

The final date for filing nomination papers with the Secretary of State, while it brought about a wealth of candidates, developed no new surprises.

Walter L. Butler of Revere failed to qualify with the proper number of signatures for the Republican nomination for United States senator causing a huge sigh of relief to go up from the camp of ex-Senator William M. Butler of Boston and New Bedford.

While it was not expected that Walter L would have fooled the G. O. P. voters through the similarity of names to any extent, nevertheless the work entailed in warning the electorate of the situation would have been to some extent formidable.

'BOSSY' GILLIS IN RACE

The qualifying of Newburyport's mayor, Andrew J. "Boss" Gillis, for the Republican nomination for Senator, makes a three-cornered contest that position, the third being Eben S. Draper of Hopedale. "Bossy's" entrance ensures a picturesque fight, although it is conceded that his chances are small.

Governor Fuller and G. Allen will be opposed by Mayor John D. Dewir of Malden for the Republican choice.

Bossy intends to "tear loose" on both Draper and Butler after he has dug up a lot of "dope" on both.

One other entrant in the Democratic headliner positions is Daniel H. Coakley of Brighton. He filed 1867 signatures for United States senator. His name, however, will not appear on the primary ballot as he is an independent candidate for the election in November.

The Democratic candidates for governor are John J. Cummings and former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston and Joseph B. Ely of Westfield. Since Cummings has repeatedly tried to get Fitzgerald out of the field without success, Cummings is now expected to stay in definitely.

Lively contests are seen in many of the 16 congressional districts in the State as well as in the eight councilor districts.

Ask General Motors to Build in Quincy

An invitation to the officials of the General Motors Corp. of Detroit, to examine a tract of land in Quincy that might be suitable for the construction of a building to house the New England branch of their Frigidaire product was made today by the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

William Edmonston, secretary of the chamber, in a telegram said the land was in South Quincy, adjacent to the Granite branch of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. He also explained that Quincy was within nine miles of Boston and was also accessible by water as well as railroad.

Tries Suicide After Brother Goes to Chair

Hartford, Ct., Aug. 13 (AP)—Four hours after Henry O. Lorenz, 28, was hanged at the Connecticut State Prison at Wethersfield for murder, his brother, Sigurd, 21, it was learned here today, was admitted to Grace hospital in Windsor, Ont., with a self-inflicted bullet wound in the head.

at Peshawar, a town that commands the Khyber Pass from Afghanistan into India, are gradually learning about the airplane. They hid in ditches and thought they were safe. British bombing planes shelled the ditches and the surviving Afridis left.

Should Peshawar fall, and the Khyber Pass be taken, the road into India would be open to all the savage tribes of Afghanistan. That would be bad for the 100,000,000 extra Hindus that British rule has added to Asia's population, making 300,000,000 in all.

The Afghans say, sincerely, "If the British would get out, we should kill one-half the Hindus, and make slaves of the other." They mean it, and with the aid of Mohammedans now in India, they might do it.

CAPT. BROOKS DEFENDS SPEED OF FAIRFAX

Says if Ship Had Been Going Fast It Would Have Cut Pinthis in Two

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 13 (AP)—Capt. Archibald R. Brooks, master of the Fairfax, which collided with the tanker Pinthis in Massachusetts bay the night of June 10, testified today at the hearing before federal inspectors that the Merchants & Miners liner was making three miles an hour when the collision occurred.

It had been charged the Fairfax was making 10 miles an hour.

Brooks was the last witness in the hearing. Four charges, including reckless operation of the Fairfax, unskilfulness and negligence, were filed against him as a result of the tragedy in which 30 lives were lost.

Altogether 23 others, witnesses, mostly members of the Fairfax crew were heard.

HEARD BUT ONE BLAST

Joseph Brait Fairfax lookout said he had followed the sea 21 years, that he saw the Pinthis suddenly loom out of the fog about 100 feet almost directly ahead, and that she sounded only one blast of her fog whistle simultaneously with her appearance.

The high lights of Capt. Brooks' testimony were as follows:

The average speed made by the Fairfax from Boston harbor to the scene of the collision was 10.57 knots.

The Fairfax struck the Pinthis at the corner of the tanker's bridge and penetrated to a depth or four or five feet. Had the Fairfax been making a speed beyond 10 miles an hour she would have cut the tanker in two.

The Pinthis sounded only one blast on her fog whistle and that only after she had emerged from the fog approximately 150 feet almost directly ahead off the starboard bow.

PINTHIS AT FULL SPEED

"If the Pinthis had been blowing her whistle regularly, would you have heard it?" Inspector Tarleton asked.

"Absolutely," was Capt. Brooks' response.

"And had you heard this whistle could you have averted the collision?"

"Positively, sir," Capt. Brooks replied.

"We have testimony," Capt. Tarleton said, "that the Pinthis was sighted at the eastern terminus of the Cape Cod Canal at New York, forty hours after this. She was at Humor Rock, the scene of the collision, at 7:05. Would this have been true if she was not running at reduced speed, taking into consideration the speed she had maintained?"

"It would," replied Capt. Brooks.

ASKS HEARING ON BROADWAY

At the request of Senator Robert J. Bigney, of South Boston, the State department of public works today granted a hearing on the order of the Boston Traffic Commission to make Broadway, South Boston, a through way.

Senator Bigney, who headed the objectors, said although an informal conference was held with Mayor Curley's office last week he felt objectors had not had a public hearing and so asked for one.

He said there is a petition before the traffic commission signed by 25 residents and urged the department to hold the matter in abeyance.

Henry J. Sullivan said Broadway is a busy street constantly lined with parked cars. There are six churches and several theaters on it, he said, and contended it is necessary for people going to them to cross the street. The proposed change he declared would be a menace to safety.

Police surgeons found the actress had not been seriously poisoned, and later released her to her personal physician and allowed her to go home. They said she told them her act was prompted by her failure to obtain the custody of her four-year-old daughter, Lita Warner. The child was adopted by a brother of Sam Warner following the latter's death.

ST. LOUIS FLIERS SMASH RECORD

2000 persons who had assembled when the record was broken.

The wives of the fliers were among those who stood in the rain to watch the record broken. They were showered with congratulations.

As a burst of sirens, aerial bombs, automobile horns and cheers went up, Jackson and O'Brien dropped down low over the field and discharged a green flare. Then they came down to within a few hundred feet of the crowd and waved.

A crowd of about 30 airplane factory workers paraded across the field carrying a banner which read aided the return of the flight record to St. Louis, with a chorus of shrieks.

The fliers' monoplane, the Greater St. Louis Robin, in which they set their record last year, appeared to the observers and the ground crew to be functioning perfectly.

RAIN CUTS OFF RADIO

It appeared that Jackson and O'Brine were attempting to speak to the crowd over their short wave length transmitter, but apparently the rainstorm interfered as they were not heard.

Jackson had said yesterday, however, they would stay up 1000 hours if the motor did not quit. The fliers this time were their own managers and masters of their own destiny.

Last year's flight ended at 420 hours, short of the aviators' 500 goal, when they were called down by the flight sponsors, an airplane manufacturing company.

"Well, they broke the record, didn't they? I guess that's all there is to it."

Duke, a well-known stock salesman for years, was taken on a fugitive warrant sworn out by Sheriff E. H. Lord of Keene. According to the New Hampshire complaints Duke peddled Holland Company stock in New Hampshire in violation of the law.

Duke was arraigned before Judge Donovan in Municipal Court, entered a plea of not guilty and was held in $500 bail. The arrest was made by Special Officer Francis Haggerty.

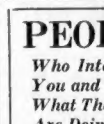
Mary Pickford Denies She'll Quit Movies

Hollywood, Aug. 13—"Our Mary" in a statement given to reporters seeking confirmation of the rumor that she would desert the movies for the legitimate stage, said that she would appear on Broadway for two months only.



Mary Pickford

Reports that Mary Pickford was financially embarrassed and was forced to desert the movies for stage appearances under the direction of Arch Selwyn in Hollywood were prevalent earlier this week.

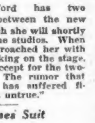
Lucille Lipke, the star's secretary, said:

"Miss Pickford has two months' time between the new pictures on which she will shortly start work at the studios. When Mr. Selwyn approached her with the offer of working on the stage, she decided to accept for the two-month period. The rumor that Miss Pickford has suffered financial losses is untrue."

Court Dismisses Suit by Valeska Suratt

New York, Aug. 13—The plagiarism suit brought by Valeska Suratt, motion picture actress, against Cecil B. DeMille, producer; Will Hays, "czar" of the motion picture world, and others, was dismissed here yesterday by Federal Judge F. J. Coleman.

In the suit Miss Suratt alleged that Jeanie MacPherson, Court DeMille Pictures Corporation and the Motion Pictures Producers and Distributors of America "stole" the story of the picture, "The King," from a scenario which she had submitted.



Valeska Suratt

"There is practically no similarity between the film and the scenario in question except that both involve the inhibited incidents which were in the public domain," the court stated in dismissing the suit.

Vanderbilt Denies He Will Wed Lily Damita

Paris, Aug. 13—William K. Vanderbilt, 3d, vacationing in Paris, yesterday emphatically denied the report, prevalent in New York, that he intends marriage with Lily Damita, stage and screen star. Lily, who is now in the south of France, could not be reached for a statement concerning the rumor.

Although reports between the Vanderbilt scion and the vivacious continental movie favorite are friendly, nothing serious can be the outcome, friends of Vanderbilt declared.

Last month, the petite Damita, was barred from the gambling casino at Le Touquet by the management because they thought she was under the age limit of 18. She is on a leave of absence from her motion picture contract with Samuel Goldwyn.

Helen Kane Never Heard Of Her $40,000 Gift

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP)—Helen Kane, who is appearing here in a loop theatre, denied the charge made by creditors of the bankrupt Bond Dress Company, in New York, that Murray J. Posner, a partner in the dress firm, had given her $40,000.

Helen Kane

The creditors obtained an injunction in the New York Supreme Court restraining Miss Kane from touching her account in a New York bank. They charged Posner gave her the money out of funds which belonged to creditors.

"Mr. Posner is a friend of mine," said Miss Kane, "but I never heard of this money business. Maybe I've been more booped against than booping."

SLAYER OF STOW COUPLE ADMITS HIS GUILT IN CONCORD COURT

PLEA OF NOT GUILTY IS ORDERED

Caught in Tangle of Statements Graboski Confesses; Held for Grand Jury

"All right, I killed them."

As dispassionate as had been his denials through ten hours of grilling came the confession late last night, of Joseph Graboski, the farmhand known as Joe Stefanosky, to the murders of Mr. and Mrs. William Stefanovics of Stow.

Caught in the tangle of his own conflicting statements, Stefanosky admitted without emotion that on June 1, a Sunday, he beat the aged Stow couple to death with a club of birchwood near the birch grove on their farm, where, last Sunday, their bodies were found buried.

MOTIVE HIDDEN

Just as stolidly he today awaited arraignment in Concord district court on first degree murder charges on which he will go to trial in Middlesex superior court, probably in September.

Special Justice Edward B. Caiger was on the bench, and when Clerk Edward T. Laughlin asked the prisoner to plead, he pleaded guilty. The statutes prevent a lower court from accepting a guilty plea to murder and not guilty was entered. He had no lawyer and court will probably name one to defend him.

The case was continued until Sept. 8, on which day the grand jury comes in, and he was remanded to East Cambridge jail without bail. State Detectives Edward F. O'Neill and Edward J. Sherlock signed the two murder warrants. The small courtroom was crowded.

An inquest will be held Friday before Justice Caiger.

Stefanosky's confession was outlined by Assistant District Attorney Warren L. Bishop in the following statement, which does not reveal the motive for the slaying, said to be important to the government's plans for prosecution:

"The defendant first denied all knowledge of the crime, maintaining that the couple had gone to Chicago for surgical treatment, and that he had heard from them and did not know that they were dead.

"He subsequently admitted that he knew that they had been killed and accused another man, who was working on the farm, stating that he, himself, was an eye witness to the double murders.

FULL CONFESSION

"Subsequently he changed his story again and made a full confession, substantially as follows: That on Sunday, June 1, about 11 o'clock, he accompanied his employer, Mr. Stefanovics, to the cow pasture in the rear of the farm to attend a sick cow, and with a birch club struck him several blows over the head while his back was turned, killing him.

"He stated that the wife, Mrs. Stasia Stefanowics, heard the shrieks and rushed out of the farmhouse to the spot where her husband was lying on the ground, and threw herself on the dead body of her husband. Whereupon, in order to conceal his crime he struck the woman over the head with the same club a number of blows until he was satisfied that she was dead.

"He returned to the house, obtained a shovel and dug a grave a short distance from the spot at which he had killed them, and buried the bodies, covering the grave with some bushes."

DEMOCRATS IN OHIO SPLIT ON DRY ISSUE

Nominate Prohibitionist for Governor and Anti for U. S. Senator

Columbus, O., Aug. 13 (AP)—Ohio Democrats took an inconsistent stand on prohibition in choosing their candidates to oppose Republicans in the November election.

They chose former Congressman White of Marietta, an outstanding dry, as their candidate for Governor, and selected former Congressman Robert J. Bulkley of Cleveland, who favors repeal of national prohibition, as their candidate for United States senator.

Republicans renominated Governor Myers Y. Cooper and Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch, both dryas, without opposition.

Bulkley had a lead of more than two to one over his nearest opponent on returns from 8703 of the state's 8956 precincts. The vote was:

Bulkley 80,098, Durbin 35,859, Truax 34,312, McSweeney 33,358 and Myers 18,861.

Mrs. Pauline Buckley of Dayton lost her "vindication" campaign for the Republican nomination for State treasurer. She sought the office formerly held by her husband, Bert B. Buckley, who was sentenced to Atlanta Penitentiary for violation of the prohibition law. The vote in 7245 precincts was: Day, 147,580; Ake, 89,212; Buckley, 85,789.

DRAPER STANDS BY 'DRY' ISSUE

Fall River, Aug. 13—Denial that he was minimizing unemployment in favor of the prohibition issue featured an address today by Eben S. Draper, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, at the Republican City Committee clambake here. He said:

"No one appreciates more than I do how vital the employment problem is to Massachusetts and New England, but I do not believe the people of Fall River want to hear any more about business in this political campaign. If all the talk about business during the campaigns of the last 10 years really meant anything, your mills today would be operating day and night.

"No one desires more than I do to see a return of full-time employment for all. This, however, is not to be attained through legislation. It must come through co-operation of capital, labor and modern efficient management.

"Therefore, recognizing employment as a great world-wide economic problem, I repeat with emphasis that prohibition is the most outstanding political issue before the American people today."

FATHER KEEPS 'KIDNAPED' GIRL

Despite contrary action by the Rhode Island courts, the Massachusetts Supreme Court will not force George W. Allen of Rehoboth to give up his child, Helen Agnes, 7, whose custody was sought by her aunt, Mrs. Harold Budlong of East Providence.

Judge William C. Wait today rejected a habeas corpus petition filed by Mrs. Budlong, who charged that Allen "kidnaped" the child from her home.

The child's parents divorced in 1928 and custody of two children given to their mother. She let her husband keep the boy, but placed the little girl with Mrs. Budlong.

Mrs. Allen died last March and Mrs. Budlong obtained a guardianship decree in the Rhode Island courts, but Allen went to East Providence and took his child home with him.

Since Mrs. Budlong filed her petition, Allen has been tried and acquitted in Rhode Island on a charge of abduction. Judge Wait ruled he was the natural guardian and was fit and able to care for his child.

Bonfire Burns Fatal to Leominster Man

Leominster, Aug. 13 (AP)—John E. Jacques, 72, of this city, was fatally burned today in a bonfire in the rear of his home. He is believed to have fainted and fallen into the fire.

JUDGE ANGRY IN MOONEY CASE

San Francisco, Aug. 13 (AP)—With three justices insisting they were wasting their time members of the State Supreme Court continued with their hearing today on the application of Warren K. Billings, convicted Preparedness Day bomber, for a pardon.

A day of bitter cross-examination and clashes between Billings' attorney and the bench was climaxed yesterday when Associate Justice Preston said he had heard enough and moved for an immediate adjournment.

"Testimony has reached the 'corned beef hash' stage," he said. "I am ready to take a vote the court conclude this hearing right now."

3 Saved as Flames Sweep Hingham Inn

Hingham, Aug. 13—Three men were rescued from the third floor of an old mansion now used as an inn on the Nantasket highway early today as fire swept through the place, causing damage estimated at $3500.

A passing motorist aroused Harvey and Ira Irish, proprietors. They slid down a water spout, got a ladder and helped three employes to escape.

Gold-Lined Grouse Is Shot by Hunter in Idaho Wilds

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 13 (AP)—As a nimrod, Gus Gilbert wins the gold lined grouse. It was one of three he shot while hunting on the upper Boise river. In its gizzard was a gold nugget the size of a lima bean.

REDS AT GATE OF HANKOW

Hankow, Aug. 13 (AP)—Hankow took on the appearance of a beleaguered city today, as authorities tightened up their defenses against the threatened Communistic attack.

Unverified reports said the Reds had re-entered Changsha, wealthy capital of Hunan province, which recently was sacked and burned by Communist bands.

Sandbag defenses had been erected at all strategic points in the native section of Hankow and machine guns mounted, giving rise to the belief authorities were anticipating a heavy Communist thrust.

Thousands of refugees from the surrounding countryside poured into Hankow. The evacuation from Wuchang and Hanyang, nearby cities, was especially heavy.

BIGELOW GIVES BEACHES 'O. K.'

Dr. George H. Bigelow, State commissioner of public health, today set at rest the fears of many persons that sea bathing is responsible for an outbreak of infantile paralysis, of which four cases have been reported in Revere.

Dr. Bigelow declared there was no danger of contracting the disease bathing at Massachusetts beaches.

His ruling was sought as a result of a radio broadcast some time ago that bathing at Nantasket was unsafe because of infantile paralysis conditions.

The Boston Health Department and others were flooded with telephone calls from anxious bathers, and the State Department of Health was then consulted. An investigation is being made to determine who was responsible for the broadcast.

In Revere, Dr. Francis A. Lieuz, Board of Health chairman, said he had made a survey of local conditions, and that the chief means of contagion are kissing, coughing or sneezing.

Flood in Nevada Wrecks Dwellings

Reno, Nevada, Aug. 13 (AP)—Three homes and a hotel were reported washed away at Round Mountain, southern Nevada mining camp, by a cloudburst which deluged that section last night.

THE PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By CARL MORRISON

Mayor Curley today was asked by the port affairs committee of the Foreign Commerce Club to request the city's industrial and publicity bureau to make a study of how more foreign conventions and tours may be secured for Boston.

Attention of the mayor was called to the present tour of European college graduates, visiting American educational institutions—not including those in and around Boston.

E. E. Elwell, chairman, suggested that steamship companies and travel agencies be informed of the present tercentenary attractions, and urged to route more trips through the port of Boston.

"We shall be glad to co-operate in any manner that you may suggest," he said, "as the bringing of such tours to Boston means income for our hotels and other businesses, as well as appropriate recognition for our scientific and educational institutions."

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

The subject of today's harbor sketch is William McConnell, export traffic manager of the customs brokerage and freight forwarding firm of T. D. Downing Co.

"Bill" is known in the harbor as the "circus man," for his job includes handing of an endless variety of circus animals, shipped through this port. Strangely enough, one of his hobbies is taking his wife and two children to see circuses.

W. McConnell

Other hobbies include auction bridge and hockey. He has the harbor record of seldom missing a hockey game. This Brighton resident is an ex-service man, having had charge of docks and stevedoring at Brest, France.

McConnell is a member of the Traffic Club and is on the marine affairs committee of the Foreign Commerce Club.

Dredging of the "shallows" in the inner harbor in front of the Eastern and other docks has been started by the Public Works Department. For several such harbor jobs, a total of about $100,000 has been appropriated by the State, which is more than double the appropriations obtained from Congress for similar work.

FAVORS CHANGE

The Boston Marine Guide, a weekly shipping bulletin, has joined the ranks of those interested in reserving Commonwealth Pier exclusively for shipping.

Says the Marine Guide:

"Some dissatisfaction is being expressed among steamship circles on the State departments quartered at the pier encroaching on cargo space for the use of offices. It is understood that the State engineering department is after more space for office room, which would curtail the space for steamship companies to handle cargoes."

WHAT ABOUT BOSTON?

Steamship travel through the port of New York for the first five months of this year totaled 347,535 passengers. This was 5 per cent more than during a similar period of last year, according to the New York Port Authority. Boston departures and arrivals would be of interest.

OFFICER'S WIFE STARTS ROW

Worcester, Aug. 13—A "house rally" conducted by Mrs. David T. Porrell, wife of a Worcester police patrolman, in the interest of State Senator George H. Nelson, running for re-election, threw this city into a furore today.

Capt. Charles S. Holden, Nelson's opponent, while not making a formal complaint, called the attention of Mayor O'Hara to the fact that regulations of the police department forbid its members from taking any active part in city politics.

Mayor O'Hara, in a statement in which he said he believed the woman was within her rights, stated that he would let Chief of Police Foley deal with the situation when he returns from his vacation.

Mrs. Porrell stated that her husband had nothing to do with the rally, that she was working in the interests of Senator Nelson and could not see why she should not take an active interest in politics.

Capt. Holden gave the opinion the matter was in violation of the police rules and regulations.

WITHDRAW PLEA FOR RECEIVER FOR BOND CO.

Augusta, Me., Aug. 13—Following a charge of ambiguity, a petition of bondholders for a receivership for the American Bond & Mortgage Co., of Chicago, filed in Supreme Court, was withdrawn today.

After a consultation of several hours between counsel and Chief Justice William R. Pattengall, it was agreed to withdraw the bill and substitute another, which will be heard tomorrow.

When the hearing opened counsel for the defense filed a demurrer, claiming the bill was not sufficiently executed or verified. The plaintiffs, it was contended, had not made or stated such a case as entitled them to any relief in equity, and the allegations so vague, the defendants could not ascertain their meaning.

Counsel for the plaintiff, Herbert F. Locke, said the bill had been drawn in due form, but the consultation was then held, resulting in the agreement to substitute another bill.

The present bill was dismissed without costs or prejudices.

CASH AWARDS FOR FUNNY ADS

Every mail brings a deluge of "Humorads" from readers exercising their wits in rewriting ads appearing in the Boston Evening American.

The idea is simple. Look at the announcements in today's issue, think of how they might be written by Joe Cook, the famous comedian, then sit down and write your own funny stab on the advertisement.

Joe Cook started the fad, by asserting that everyone had as keen a sense of humor as he displays in his new all talking picture "Rain or Shine" which begins at the Keith Memorial Theatre next Saturday. The Boston American is offering cash prizes for the best examples of advertising wit. Each day, "Humorads" which are judged the best entitle the writer to two tickets to Cook's picture. These are given in addition to the cash awards.

Try your hand at a "Humorad" today. See details elsewhere in this issue.

Seeks Court Action to Force Office Lock

Worcester, Aug. 13 (AP)—David B. Isenberg today filed a bill in equity in Superior Court, asking for an accounting and a dissolution of the partnership insurance business conducted by himself and his brother, Alfred G. Isenberg, and that a receiver be appointed.

It is also alleged that Alfred had a special lock made for the office to prevent David from getting in, and has placed a guard at the office to keep his brother out.

Likes New System in Tests

Editor Boston American:

Just a little favorable criticism. Among the articles in your paper that I enjoy is the knowledge test.

What I wish to comment upon especially, is the fact that you are now giving the answers in the same issue that the questions appear.

I used to write in my answers and then clip out the "test" to compare it with the correct answers the next day. This new arrangement is an improvement.

No doubt this seems a trivial thing to write about but too many people are too ready to criticize unfavorably. I like to strike a balance.

(MISS) MABEL V. ELLISON.

New Traffic Lights Cause Congestion

Editor Boston American:

There is no use depending too exclusively upon traffic lights to prevent congestion.

Yesterday, I stood at the junction of Bromfield and Tremont sts., watching the congestion. It was affording me a good study of these lights.

They cannot unravel the snarl, for they have not the skill or ingenuity of the traffic officer. They are too mechanical. They keep changing and adding to congestion until no driver of an auto can head them.

They will not do in the narrow streets of Boston. This is being proved again and again. They are serviceable in the wider streets. I believe one of your reporters is right on this matter. JOHN H. JEFFERSON.

Hungry Man Gets Pigeons' Bread

Editor Boston American:

A bit of bread, thrown from an upper window of the Foot Hill fire station, meant for the pigeons alighting constantly in that vicinity for food, was at once snapped up by a hungry man who slid it into his pocket and pulled bits of that bread from the lump, as he quickened his steps away.

Capt. "Tom" Brown with his big heart saw the incident. He called to the hungry man. He used the sliding pole to get to the stranger. But even with the aid of others around chasing the hungry man, he had slipped away into some alley to enjoy his meal. The firemen were anxious to give him a helping hand.

A hungry man munching the bread thrown to pigeons is quite a contrast to the luxury that often flaunts itself in other sections of this city. But we must expect contrasts in life. Here is a striking one.

JOHN J. KELLIGAN.

Criticizes Statement of Professor

Editor Boston American:

Forty-five per cent of the people of the United States are morons.

So declares Dr. H. H. Goddard, professor of abnormal psychology at Ohio State University.

This is his reason why we are confronted with so much crime, disease, creating great social problems which cannot be solved until we change our methods of punishment. He cited a case here in this state where a girl was sentenced to prison for stubbornness at sport two years there. She should have been sent to the psychopathic hospital.

Dr. Goddard says half of the world is incompetent, and it is the duty of the other half to care for it. If these doctors or professors keep up their tattle, it will not be so hard to die—after all!

CHARLES F. FINCH.

Number of Unsolved Crimes Increases

Editor Boston American:

Murder will out. Does it?

Take the number of policemen murdered in the last 30 or more years in Boston and suburbs. How few of these murderers have been found and brought to justice.

Murder is getting to be more than ever one of the fine arts. De Quincey so marked it in one of his essays. But murder is a finer and more concealed art in modern life than in the past.

Who killed the Joyce children in West Roxbury woods years ago? Who killed Mr. Nathan in his mansion on 23d st., New York city? One could cite other instances of murder nearer Boston than these. But the fact remains that more ingenuity is being poured into the plan of committing a murder than ever before. The Hall murder in New Jersey showed this.

Police are better qualified than ever to get results. But murder is a greater problem because of the multiplied agencies to conceal it.

Says No Nation May Claim North Pole

Editor Boston American:

A discussion in your paper some time ago asked the question who owns the North Pole? It is still a moot question; has it ever been discovered?

We have no instruments delicate enough to indicate the exact spot. Commander Donald McMillan describes this as a pin point in thousands of miles of ice fields.

We must have more accurate news about the North Pole before any nation can claim ownership.

N. M. NELSON.

Says Secretary's Trip Is Childish

Editor Boston American:

The tour of the Secretary of Agriculture and the chairman of the farm board through the Western states to tell the farmers to reduce acreage as a remedy for low prices of farm products is the most childish performance of government officials that we have witnessed since the Federal Reserve Board reduced the brokers' loans and brought on the panic of last October.

The secretary and chairman have lost the confidence of the farmers and should resign.

The best remedy for panics and industrial depressions is bountiful crops, and not reduced acreage. While 20 per cent of the people of the world never have enough to eat, acreage should not be reduced. Put the unemployed to work and the surplus wheat will disappear.

But wheat, corn, cotton, cattle and hogs have not fallen in price measured in terms of one another; it is only when they are measured in terms of money that they seem to have gone down, which shows that they have not actually gone down, but that money has gone up in purchasing power.

The remedy does not lie with the farmers or with decreased acreage, but with the financial officials in Washington who should increase the volume of money in circulation and thereby bring down the purchasing power of the dollar. J. E. CAMPION.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

That's a good idea in your editorial to use the ungarrisoned forts in New England for playgrounds. It was agitated some time ago when Gen. Clarence R. Edwards was in command of the First Corps Area.

Objections came from Washington, however, and the matter was dropped.

Take that old fort at the end of South Boston. What an opportunity to have hundreds of children in that locality happy by turning this into a spacious playground?

Waterloo was won on the playgrounds of Eton, it has been said over in England. If this be true let us demonstrate something like this by increasing the number of playgrounds around Greater Boston. Your letter column has already agitated this. Boston has more playgrounds now than ever before. They can be made educational centers.

PROFITEERING IN FOOD PRICES IS CHARGED

Washington, Aug. 13 (AP)—A complaint of an "undue" increase in prices of fresh vegetables in New York city as a result of the drought was laid before President Hoover today by Representative LaGuardia of New York.

LaGuardia, a Republican, said the President requested him to take up the matter with the Department of Agriculture. The representative made an appointment with Secretary Hyde for later in the day.

He said unless some immediate action were taken to prevent unnecessary price increases, "very drastic steps will be taken by consumers."

Government reports today revealed that typhoid fever is gradually spreading in many states hardest hit by the drought, but effective work by federal and state health agencies thus far has prevented the disease from reaching the epidemic stage.

The knowledge that a depleted water and milk supply in some areas has created prime conditions for the spread of typhoid caused federal officials to give disease prevention an important place in the drought-relief program.

The program of President Hoover, it was indicated, will be directed along three definite lines—prevention of human suffering and actual want because of lack of food, prevention of disease and saving of livestock.

Along with the possibility of typhoid fever epidemics is faced the possible spread of dysentery, pellagra and other diseases which arise from a poorly balanced diet, according to officials of the United States public health service.

COUPLE WITH $70,000 SAFE

St. Louis, Aug. 13 (AP)—Charles Kern, rich retired floor buyer, past 70 years old, and Mrs. Kern, for whom a wide search was conducted yesterday after their strange disappearance in Ohio with a $70,000 bank treasurer's check which Kern had drawn from a bank here, were back home today. No explanation of their absence was offered.

Police had feared the aged couple had fallen into the clutches of kidnapers or swindlers. Mr. and Mrs. Kern said they had gone to Ohio to visit relatives but would make no further disclosures. They did deny they had been kidnaped or swindled.

Kern was unwilling to be questioned concerning a real estate deal which he had told his banker was the purpose of his large withdrawal of funds and his trip to Ohio.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS AND GOSSIP

CHEVROLET IN NEW RECORD FOR SIXES

Flint, Mich., Aug. 13—Another automotive record toppled here when the Chevrolet Motor Co. turned out its two-millionth six-cylinder car, less than 20 full months after the introduction of this type.

Just as Chevrolet led the world in four-cylinder car production during the last two years that the company built that type, so now it assumes leadership in the six-cylinder field by having built nearly five times as many sixes in 20 months as any other manufacturer in the history of the industry.

The two-millionth six—a coach—rolled off the line here with Chevrolet and General Motors executives in attendance to witness the final assembly of the car, for which no further ceremonies were planned.

The brief time required by Chevrolet to build two million sixes provides an index of the rapid strides made by this organization to the front rank of volume car builders. The company was organized late in 1911, and there were required nearly 17 years to turn out five million of the old four cylinder cars, while two million sixes have been placed on the streets and highways of the world since January 1, 1929, or in a total time of only 19 months and one week.

Commenting on the manufacture of the two millionth six, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, stated that the fact of establishing a new record was significant mainly in that it indicated a definite public preference for the performance and luxury which a six affords in the low priced field.

SHOW ABILITY OF WILLYS 6

The advancement of modern automobile engineering is probably nowhere better exemplified than in its thoroughness. This thoroughness is reflected in numerous ways. Not only is every part of the modern automobile perfect in itself but it fits perfectly into the machine as a whole, all of which is a result of precision secured by thoroughness. Guesswork has no part in manufacturing motor cars, says Irving Clark, Boston Whippet-Knight Corp.

Take the Willys Six. Before this car was manufactured the engineers knew on paper just what it could be expected to do, how fast it would go, how durable it was and how much power it would develop.

The engineers, however, had to be even more thorough than this. Before the Willys Six was placed in production it was given every conceivable test under rigorous operating conditions.

"We knew the Willys Six and put it through test after test. We drove these cars over roads of all kinds, through traffic, in heavy congested centers, on the open road. We drove some of them more than 25,000 miles at speeds of between 30 and 60 miles per hour, hour after hour. And after running up this mileage at these high speeds we found that the engines stood up as well that the valves didn't even need replacing."

STONE CO. NEW OLDS DEALER

Announcement of a new dealer to handle the Oldsmobile-Viking line in Watertown was made by E. Mahoney, city sales manager of the Olds Motor Works.

The new dealer, the oldest in Watertown, is the J. W. Stone Co., Inc., at 43-45 North Beacon st. J. Winthrop Stone, president, states that the concern has sold and delivered 1300 automobiles in Watertown and vicinity in the past nine years and feel that in taking on this General Motors line, Oldsmobile and Viking, they will fill a much needed want for sales and service in this vicinity.

Irving M. Buffum, treasurer and manager, as well as Mr. Stone, are both life-long residents of Watertown.

E. R. Savory, in charge of sales, has been associated with Mr. Stone for the last seven years and is rated as one of the leading retail salesmen in New England.

Unemployed Build Roads in Quebec

Fifteen thousand men are now engaged in road work in the Province of Quebec, making the construction, improvement and maintenance of highways and roads one of the principal industries affording relief to unemployment. Later there will be almost 20,000 men employed by the provincial department of highways to look after the road work.

NEW DE SOTO CONCERN

The De Soto line of motor cars, a Chrysler product, will be marketed through Cottage Farm Motor Sales, Inc., at 756 Commonwealth ave. Although the concern itself is new, men well known in the industry are identified with it.

Among the facilities provided for De Soto owners and buyers are a modernly equipped service station, salesroom and offices.

The establishment of this new sales outlet comes at the beginning of the De Soto's third year. Offered first to the public on Aug. 4, 1928, the De Soto achieved the record sales total of 81,065 units in its first 12 months. In its second year the line moved into 11th place in the industry.

Frank L. McNulty, factory representative, speaking of the new concern, said:

"We at the factory are well pleased with the showing made by De Soto in New England. It has ever been our policy to have our product handled by capable organizations and Cottage Farm Motor Sales, Inc., will measure up to our high standards."

WRITE A "HUMORAD"!

(A "Humorad" is any advertisement rewritten in humorous vein without offence to advertiser or reader.)

Enjoy yourself! Win a cash prize award!

Re-write Any Advertisement in This Paper

Here's some good fun! Joe Cook believes that many good chuckles can be uncorked when you rewrite some of today's advertisements in the form of "Humorads." All this week you have chances to tickle the funny bones of Boston American readers with some of your own ideas of good "Humorads." Joe Cook, America's popular exponent of mirth, appears at the R. K. O. Keith Theatre in his new, all-talking, Columbia picture "Rain or Shine," beginning Saturday, August 16th.

You are invited to rewrite any advertisement (classified or display), or any part of any advertisement in this issue of the Boston American in your own "Joe Cook" style and manner. Then submit your "Humorad" in competition for the cash prizes. Men, women and children are eligible. Send in as many as you wish.

Remember—write as humorously as you wish without offense to advertiser or reader. Prize-winning "Humorads" will be published in the Boston Evening American and broadcast over Station WHDH.

We give you the general idea of how it can be done in the two ads below. The one on the left is an original ad as it might be written by an advertiser; on the right you see the same ad rewritten as a "Humorad," as Joe Cook might have done it.

and here's a little lift for you

3. All entries must be postmarked before midnight, August 17, at midnight.
4. The nine most humorous advertisements will receive cash prizes as follows:

5. The five best Humorads received each day will entitle the writer to two (2) tickets of admission to see Joe Cook in the Columbia Picture, "Rain or Shine" at R. K. O. Keith's Theatre during the seven-day period, beginning Saturday, August 16.
6. You may write as many Humorads as you wish. There is no limit to the number of entries.

ALFONSO SEES DO-X TESTS

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable

Friedrichshafen, Aug. 13—The test flights of the 12-motored German flying boat DO-X, which next month is scheduled to take off from Lisbon on a two-stop flight to New York with 14 persons aboard, will be resumed today in the presence of Alfonso, Crown Prince of Spain.

The tests were interrupted yesterday by the breaking of the drive of one of the 12 Curtiss engines, resulting in the cylinders of that motor being "frozen" by overheating. The motor has been replaced by a spare engine, which is on hand at the Dornier works for such emergencies.

The performance of the DO-X in tests so far has exceeded expectations. With a total weight of 99,500 pounds, the DO-X took off from Lake Constance in 2 1/2 minutes and reached an altitude of 3100 feet above the surface of the lake—which is 1300 feet above sea level—in 10 minutes. At that point the plane was climbing at a rate of 220 feet a minute.

Tax Rate Reduced to $30 in Whitman

Has to Keep on Her Feet

"My work is keeping a rooming house in New York and I have to keep on my feet. I was weak and tired and didn't seem to feel well at all. Some of my friends told me how good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was and I decided to try it. I took it four times a day and it helped me very much. I feel better in all ways now."—Mrs. Marie Vriesenga, 2002 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y.

Daily Antique
No. 170

This is an old chest made in this country in the 17th century. Although it looks very elaborate, in truth the construction is very simple, as simple as was the construction of early houses.

The chest was the most useful piece of furniture possessed by the colonists. In it were stored clothing, all sorts of valuables, and even food. People sat on them; for chairs were few at the time. Sometimes chests served as beds, and it is not unlikely that many a 17th century young boy has in a bad dream, tumbled off this fine old piece. It is in the Museum of Fine Arts near the gallery of old ship models and, like the ship models, is the gift of one of the museum's good friends, Mr. J. Templeman Coolidge.

Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of antiques of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the Antique Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

Business Slumps at Bathhouses

Despite the hot weather, State bathhouses at Nantasket, Revere and Lynn beaches have lost patronage this year, reports to the Metropolitan District Commission show.

Because of the excessive heat, more people motored to the beaches dressed in their bathing suits than in other years, officials explain.

70 Die as Pirate Mine Blasts Chinese Boat

Canton, China, Aug. 13 (AP)—Seventy persons, most of them women, were drowned Monday evening when a large Chinese launch proceeding from Hongkong to Kongmoon, on the Kisang estuary, was blown up by a mine.

The outrage was believed to have been committed by river pirates who had been refused protection fees by the river launch owners.

79 Missing After Crash of 2 Ships Off Shantung

Tokio, Aug. 13 (AP)—Seventy-nine persons, passengers, were missing after a collision of the Chinese steamers Tung On and Lien Hsiang in a heavy fog off Shantung peninsula (China). Reuter's news agency dispatches from Dairen said today.

The Tung On, a twin-screw steamer of British registry, sank immediately after the collision. All passengers and crew were believed lost. The Lien Hsiang was disabled.

MARY PICKFORD SEEKS TALKIE RIGHTS TO 'KIKI' FOR HER NEXT FILM

SAM TAYLOR WINS FIGHT FOR COMEDY ROLE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor for Universal Service
Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Aug. 13—Sam Taylor has won out in his argument that comedy is best for Mary Pickford. He will, provided it is possible to get the talking rights to "Kiki," direct our Mary in the stage success of Lenore Ulric and, incidentally, in the talkie version of one of Norma Talmadge's most conspicuous screen successes.

United Artists, Mary's own company, owns the screen rights to "Kiki" having purchased it from David Belasco for Norma Talmadge. Mr. Belasco himself adapted "Kiki" from the French and achieved a notable success with it on the stage.

The story of "Kiki," in that of a French gamin and it runs the gamut of extreme comedy. It is slapstick tendencies but there is enough of a romance along with the comedy to give it popular interest. There couldn't be any greater contrast in plays than exists between "Kiki" and "Secrets" which Mary started and refused to finish because she could not be sure of it as the right vehicle for her.

Louella O. Parsons

"GENTLEMAN'S FATE," a book by Urania Parrott of "Wife" fame, due to be published this fall, has already been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Irving Thalberg knows the value of Miss Parrott's books by now. "Ex Wife" and "Divorcee" as it was renamed, is cleaning up and "Strangers May Kiss" ought to make another big success. I have an idea after the Thalberg heir is born, Norma Shearer will bring "Strangers May Kiss" to the screen. After "Let Us Be Gay" and "Divorcee" Norma can command pretty near writing her own ticket. While I haven't been officially notified I have a shrewd idea "Gentleman's Fate" will star William Haines. Billy is slated to do a comic story as his next and from the description this one sounds as if it were meant for Billy since he is to do a gangster picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

CHARLES CHRISTY announced to me at the Lasky party with what sounded like his voice that his brother, Al, would direct "Charley's Aunt." "Al," he said, "has always wanted to direct and he has such original ideas for this picture that he completely won me over to the idea." Charles Ruggles, who plays the lead, was also at the Laskys'. He,

Charles Ruggles

Mr. Christy believes, is ideal for the role and he looks to see this picture make Ruggles one of the most popular comedians on the screen. Harry Edwards will be associated with the Christys in the production of "Charlie's Aunt."

WHAT HAPPENS after a big picture? James Hall in "Hell's Angels" has been free-lancing and doing well for himself. His next assignment is at the Tiffany studios, where he plays the male lead in "The Third Alarm." This is the picture which brings that charming 15-year-old Anita Louise to the screen. Ben Lyon, who was sought after by all the film producers after his appearance in "Hell's Angels," has been handed a five year contract with Warner Brothers. Ben is on his way to New York to attend the premiere of "Hell's Angels."

ONE OF THE MOST distinguished guests that Hollywood has had in a long time is John Erskine, famous novelist, playwright and critic. Mr. Erskine has been visiting the William De Milles and he has been seen many places with them. His mission in Hollywood now is a motion picture one, having come to pictureland to assist Universal with the production of his novel, "Sincerity." Universal calls it "The Lady Surrenders." I wonder why? Mr. Erskine, at one time, wrote scathing articles for the British press against motion pictures. Perhaps now that he has met some of the people face to face he will not be so bitter against our picture folk.

I WONDER IF THE title, "Don't Bite Your Dentist," came to Mack Sennett during the time he takes an early morning swim at Santa Monica. It's certainly a telepathic moniker that ought to bring those who love their comedy into the theaters. Eddie Cline, who has been signed to direct 12 short reelers, will make "Don't Bite Your Dentist" as the first of the series. Wesley Barry is being featured and Andy Clyde is the star. Daphne Pollard and Patsy O'Leary are in the cast.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: Mary Nash escorted by John Colton, a guest at the Jesse Lasky dinner dance. . . . Gloria Swanson accompanied by the Marquis De La Falaise's brother, also a guest. . . . Ronita Moreno giving a very picturesque dance in the moonlight at the party. Martini, Italian singer, delighting everyone with his singing at the same place. The Albertina Rasch girls, effective against the background of ocean, dancing at the Lasky dinner. The two younger Lasky children, Betty and Bill, being permitted to stay up a little while and listen to the stringed orchestra playing in the patio. Mary Pickford interested in watching the manipulation of the spotlights from a balcony of the Lasky Beach home. Charlie Chaplin dancing with Georgie Hale. Leon Erroll getting applause at the Laskys' with his famous postoffice boy number.

VILLAIN ROLE HIS LEGACY

Francis X. Bushman, Jr., seems to fall into roles with William Haines quite regularly since their first appearances together in "Alias Jimmy Valentine." His latest appearance on the screen with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star is in "Way Out West" at Loew's State this week. In this film, Bushman plays the role of Haines' cowboy rival for the love of Leila Hyams, who was in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and "The Girl Said No."

Bushman is the son of Francis X. Bushman, star of a few years back. The name Bushman still carried prestige and it wasn't long before the youngster was signed to appear in "The Understanding Heart." He proved to be a most satisfying sort of villain in this production and has continued to play this type of role in his last few pictures.

Jane Cowl Is to Appear Here in Two New Plays

Following the return of Miss Jane Cowl and Joseph Verner Reed from Europe last week, Kenneth Macgowan and Mr. Reed announce details of their plans for the presentation of Miss Cowl in two plays, "When Hell Froze," by Wilbur Daniel Steele and Norman Mitchell, and Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night." "Twelfth Night" will go into rehearsal next Monday. It will open a three weeks' engagement at the Wilbur, Boston, on September 8. Following the opening, "When Hell Froze" will be put into rehearsal and produced the week of September 29.

"Ship Shapes"

Bradley Cass, leading man of Christopher Morley's production in Hoboken of "After Dark," has been engaged for "Ship Shapes," a new revue which will be the second edition of the "Cape Cod Follies." "Ship Shapes" will open at the Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Cape Cod, on August 25, where it will play for two weeks, then be sent to Boston and New York.

Amusements

"Street Scene"

"Street Scene," the Elmer Rice play, will have its long-delayed London premiere on September 8, Leon M. Lion will make the presentation, and the staging will be under the supervision of the author. Three companies are to present "Street Scene" on tour in America.

"SINS OF THE CHILDREN" AT STATE

"The microphone reminds me of working in a room with a very nervous person—one of those people who jump if you tap the floor with your toe unexpectedly. In fact, by imagining he's in a room with such a person, the actor is sure he'll never make a noise that'll spoil his scene."

This is the formula of Louis Mann for being safe in talking pictures. The New York stage star has evolved it while appearing in his first picture role in "The Sins of the Children," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama of family life coming to Loew's State next Monday. Talking picture difficulties afford the actor many opportunities for expressing meanings than the stage and he says that after years of experience ranging from Shakespeare with McCullough and Barrett to musical comedy with Weber and Fields, Mann has appeared in dozens of plays, and has even written a great many.

Louis Mann

"The talking picture, with microphone and closeup, brings the audience face to face with the player," he says. "It means that the player must be far more careful to give a good performance but it also means that the audience will get fine points of it that might be lost on the stage."

Sam Wood directed the new picture, in which Mann plays the father of a family, and comedy and pathos are blended in the composition of old and new generations.

The cast includes Leila Hyams, Robert Montgomery, Elliott Nugent, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., James Donlan, Clara Blandick, Dell Henderson, Robert McWade, Henry Armetta and a number of clever children, including Dorothy Peterson, Betsy Ann Hisle, Evelyn and Edwin Mills and Gordon Thorpe.

"Hot Numbers"

Fox will utilize some of his best comedy talent in "Hot Numbers," which Sidney Lanfield will direct. The cast includes George Corcoran, Richard Keene, William Collier, Sr., and Gus Howard, in addition to Leslie Mae, Nancy Kelly, the Keating Sisters, Walter Byron and Zasu Pitts. Ray Harris and Russell Medcraft wrote the story, with lyrics and music by Joseph McCarthy and James Hanley. Ralph Block will be associate producer.

Carillon Recital at Norwood Sunday

The next presentation in the series of popular carillon recitals at the Norwood Municipal Building, with Kamiel Lefevere as carillonneur, will be given Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. The program follows:

COOK'S 'RAIN OR SHINE' FOR KEITH'S

Joe Cook, famous "one-man show," who has also been called "the funniest man in America," makes his motion picture debut in the Columbia film version of "Rain or Shine," coming to the New B. F. Keith's next Saturday.

Joe Cook not only can, but does do an entire show himself. He sings; plays various musical instruments, performs difficult acrobatic feats, dances, conjures, walks a wire and does trick sharp-shooting. All these stunts are performed by him in "Rain or Shine."

Clever as his stunts are, it is the inexhaustible and rapid-fire flow of humorous conversation that makes him sure-fire for laughter.

In securing the screen rights to "Rain or Shine," Columbia Pictures scored one of the greatest "beats" of the year. The stage play, with Joe Cook and his famous assistants, Tom Howard and Dave Chasen who are also with him in the picture, ran for nearly two years at the New George M. Cohan Theatre, New York City. It is a matter of record that the first 33 weeks brought a revenue of $1,178,850, which, considering the size of the theater, meant a sell-out at every performance.

Cowles Strickland, directors of the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge, will turn to one of the successes of the past Broadway season, and will present one of the John Drinkwater's comedy, "Bird in Hand." The playhouse directors have selected play chiefly as a vehicle for Hugh Buckley.

DOBRANS MADE MANAGER OF DUDLEY

Barney Dobrans, at the age of 26, has just been made manager of the Publix Dudley Theater and his friends are accelaiming him the youngest on such a job in the country. Born in Cardiff, Wales August 6, 1904, he studied at English schools and in 1916 entered Brockton high school shortly after the family moved to Brockton. He graduated from Boston University with an A. B. and studied two years in the Harvard graduate school. Until last April he was an assistant to Manager George Laby at the Washington St. Olympia, after finishing the course at the Paramount-Publix school in New York. He has been manager of the Dudley. He is enterprising and able, and Publix officials predict a career for him. His friends get a "kick" out of his resemblance both to Richard Barthelmess, the film star, and to Larry Beagy, just recently promoted from manager of the Metropolitan to the Publix home office in New York.

PART OF THE GREAT WHITE FLEET AT MARBLEHEAD

A RECORD NUMBER of 269 yachts took part in the race off Marblehead yesterday to close the mid-summer series of the Eastern Yacht Club. The above photo shows part of the fleet struggling along in a light breeze. Another big fleet will take part in the Tercentenary races today.

AT LEAST FOUR PLAYERS ARE SLATED TO GO BEFORE END OF SEASON, IS REPORT

By JOE CASHMAN

Another wholesale shift in the St. Louis Browns aggregation is imminent.

Manager Bill Killefer is so disgusted with the showing of most of his charges this season that he has turned the job of directing the club over to his right eye, Jimmy Austin, and is touring the sticks looking for new talent.

Brownies believed certain to go before another season include Sammy Hale, Lou Blue, Fred Schulte and Sammy Grey, all good ball players, but not doing so well in the Mound City.

Joe Cashman

Killefer learned from Dan Howley, his predecessor, that the only thing to do with players who aren't producing is to get rid of them, no matter how great.

He saw the former Browns and present Cincinnati Reds pilot fire most of the regulars of a team which finished seventh and come back next season with a bunch of newcomers who finished third, and he is determined to try the same experiment, according to reports.

Sammy Hale, secured from the Athletics last spring, naturally never liked the shift and when Killefer kept him on the bench and used the veteran Frank O'Rourke at the hot corner, he quit the team.

He is back now but still a sub and probably much more dissatisfied with his lot than ever before since his temporary desertion set him back $100.

Waivers were recently asked on Lou Blue and every club in both leagues are reported to have waived on the veteran first sacker, which gives Killifer the right to send the player back to the minors, if he so desires.

Gray is suffering from a fractured bone in his playing hand and isn't even with the club. He was one of the best burlers in the league under Howley, but has been away off form most of the season.

Schulte, considered one of the best young outfielders in the business two short years back, is sitting on the bench while Alex Metzler, a White Sox castoff, is patrolling center field, which indicates that the former will not wear a Brown uniform much longer.

It isn't Killefer's fault if any of his players aren't living up to expectations. He's a fine fellow, a smart manager, and his charges admire and respect him.

What dissatisfaction, if any, exists on the team, is due to Phil Ball, owner of the outfit.

The veterans on the club didn't like the way he treated Howley while the Weymouth pilot was turning out winning teams in the Mound City, and they strongly resented the remarks he made about Dan when he fired him last fall.

Only New Players Can Save Browns

And most of the players feel that their boss is responsible for the unpopularity of baseball in St. Louis.

Consequently, the only way Killefer can hope to succeed is to get a lot of new blood.

The Browns are now only four and a half games ahead of our Red Sox and unless they play a lot better than they did in the opener of their series here, it shouldn't be long before they are several games behind the natives.

They could have taken the lead and might have won the game in the ninth inning had Chad Almquist run to first base when Charlie Berry let a third strike roll to the fence, but, with the entire St. Louis team yelling at him to move, he stood in his tracks until the ball was recovered and thrown to first to put him out.

Young Stribling Sought by Rival Promoters

Mr. Boston's attention has been called to news dispatches from New York telling of the home-coming of Young Stribling.

"The Georgian will have to fight his way through a flock of rival promoters as he comes parading down the gangplank," said Mr. Boston.

"Stribling's popularity is due to his one-round knockout of Otto Von Porat and his two-round kayo of Phil Scott.

"I am glad that the promoters are finally making a fuss over an American fighter who is arriving from Europe. Usually the bird who comes tripping down the gangplank is some foreign battler whose only claim for fame is that he traveled 3000 miles without getting sea-sick.

Sharkey-Carnera Bout Planned for Chicago

"In the event the New York Garden is unable to sign Sharkey and Stribling, it is likely that the Boston heavyweight will be pitted against Primo Carnera in a tussle at Chicago.

"This match has the blessing of George Getz and the other members of the Illinois Boxing Commission. It is felt in Chicago that a collision between Carnera and Sharkey would help to boom the fistic game in the Middle West.

"Mike Malloy is the promoter who is seeking this bout. He already has signed Carnera and plans to drop the match in either Soldiers Field or at the White Sox baseball orchard.

"Sharkey attended the Braddock-Hunt bout following a fishing trip to New Hampshire. He stated that he would like to toss punches at the gigantic Carnera.

Braddock-Hunt Bout Helped Boxing Here

"The ten round bout between Jimmy Braddock and Babe Hunt at Braves Field helped the boxing game here. The bout came up to advance expectations. The dear old fans received a run for their money which is a strange thing nowadays. The tussle followed the Shade-Anderson mill which was also a red hot affair.

"If the boxers and promoters will give the fans a break, they will find the sledding much easier."

Boston College May Try Out Night Football

By BILL CONNELL

Boston College, which has taken a prominent place in the college football world in the past 10 years, may give Greater Boston folks something new in local college grid games this fall by introducing night football at Fenway Park.

The plan has been under consideration for a long time, since some of the Western colleges tried out night grid games and found them to be very successful.

Bill Connell

Authorities at Boston College are not ready to make any definite pronouncement on night football yet. John Curley, graduate manager of athletics at B. C., and Joe McKenney, head coach of the football team, have nothing to say on the matter at this time.

Some decision may be made by the authorities at the Heights within the next few days. In the meanwhile the matter is receiving growing approval from B. C. alumni and from the thousands of other friends of the college in Greater Boston.

In adopting night football Boston College would not be making any great departure from custom. Marquette University of Milwaukee, like B. C., is conducted by the Jesuits. And Marquette, which always turns out strong elevens, has played night football through one full season and from the success of the venture plans to continue.

Georgetown University also is slated to play at least one night game this fall.

Night Games Should Prove Popular

From the standpoint of the public night football should be popular. It is little, if any, colder at night than on the usual frosty Saturday afternoons of the fall.

The present illumination developed by the engineers of the great electric corporations is so good that it is easier to follow a complete football game at night than in the day.

Boston football fans can recall the second half and especially the final periods of games in the Harvard Stadium, Braves Field and Fenway Park when the officials were unable accurately to render decisions, and when at times the same men were obliged to allow the watches to run, that the game might be finished without serious injury to the players.

This writer remembers Boston College games and Harvard games of the past when even the scribes, with the aid of high-powered field glasses, did not know exactly what happened toward the end of some games. Sometimes it has been necessary to get information from the coaches after the game in order clearly to tell of the final plays.

Under the present type of lights developed by research engineers, night baseball has become extremely popular in all the cities which have adopted it. The lighting is so perfect that the ball can be followed at all times.

Last year B. C. was expected to play a night game, with Marquette at Milwaukee, but a last minute change in the plans caused the game to be played in the afternoon.

This year it is possible that the Maroon and Gold will play at night at Chicago with Loyola.

British Track Team in Quebec for Meet

Quebec, Aug. 13 (AP)—Great Britain's team of 64 athletes headed by Lord David Burghley, Olympic 400-meter hurdling champion, arrived here today to compete in the British empire games at Hamilton, Ont., beginning Saturday.

DILBOY BOUTS TO START EARLY

In order that the 35 bouts scheduled in tonight's Dilboy amateur tournament at Dilboy Field, Somerville, will be terminated at midnight as a new city ordinance requires, the first bout of the evening will go on promptly at 7:30. Five classes will be contested, the 118, 126, 147, 175 pounds and the heavyweights.

In the heavyweight class Al Dean of Medford, Ed Muss of Boston, Ted Johnson of Somerville, Henry Surrett of Leominster and Mack Peschier of Newton will compete.

The 126-pound division seems to be the most popular judging from the large entry list. Ed Cutone of Somerville; Larry Zangin, winner of the N. Y. Golden Glove championship; Henry Burns of Somerville, Jack Richis of Lowell and Vincent Bergy of Lawrence are the outstanding competitors.

The Tercentenary Committee has donated in the name of all three clubs prizes for the day's racing. The committee decided to have the trophies sailed for in one race rather than to have the seven events of the Eastern, Boston and Corinthian count for the prizes.

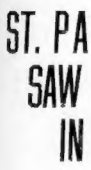
Wilson Gave O'Dowd Crushing Defeat in New York

ST. PATRICK'S DAY CROWD SAW DOWNFALL OF MIKE IN BOUT AT GARDEN

By JACK CONWAY

Battling Siki showed great courage, if not much judgment, when he signed to battle McTigue in Dublin, Ireland on St. Patrick's Day. At the time Siki was world's light heavyweight champion. When the bout ended, he was without his title.

Johnny Wilson displayed as much courage when he agreed to defend his world's middleweight crown against Mike O'Dowd at the old Madison Square Garden, New York, on St. Patrick's Day back in 1921.



Jack Conway

After O'Dowd lost his championship to Wilson in Boston, he went to New York, where he set up a cry he had been the victim of a "Boston Decision." O'Dowd had always been popular in New York and his statements received wide circulation.

There are more Irish in New York than in Dublin, and every mother's son of them wanted to see O'Dowd win back his title.

The late Tex Rickard, with his finger on the pulse of the people, saw the money value in a Wilson-O'Dowd bout. He asked Marty Killilea, Wilson's manager, to hop to New York to discuss the prospects of a return bout with O'Dowd. When Killilea returned, I met him at the Commonwealth A. A. on Tremont st. He was showing the gang a contract which called for the Garden to pay Wilson $48,000 to meet O'Dowd. It was the largest guarantee ever given a middleweight up to that time and the first big purse ever offered a Boston boxer.

O'Dowd trained in New York, while Wilson got into condition here in Boston.

Wilson didn't leave for Broadway until the night before the bout. I rode over to New York on the 5 o'clock train with Wilson, Marty Killilea, Harry Kelley and Henry Myers. I noticed that the champion's left hand was badly swollen and I mentioned this matter to Wilson.

"I hurt the hand training," replied Johnny, "but I wouldn't ask for a postponement of this bout for all the money in the world. A lot of people have been saying I didn't lick O'Dowd in Boston. I'm now going to prove to them who is the better man."

Wilson got off the train at 125th st and spent the night at an uptown hotel.

CROWD FOR O'DOWD

When Wilson entered the Garden, the place was jammed with O'Dowd rooters. Wilson, who had spent his childhood in New York, had plenty of backers, but they were outnumbered 5 to 1 by the O'Dowd supporters.

Boston sent a train of Royal Rooters to New York. They were headed by Tom Green, now a member of the City Council, and his brother Roy. Tom and Roy had backed the bout promoted by the Fenway A. A. at which Wilson had won the championship.

In the face of a hostile crowd, Wilson stepped in and gave as fine an exhibition of boxing and fighting as I have ever seen. He first cut O'Dowd down with jarring right jabs and hooks and then beat him into submission with driving left hand uppercuts to the body.

Wilson was the master of a fine left hand uppercut to the body. He would score with this punch as O'Dowd would come sweeping forward. Johnny's timing was perfect and there was crushing power behind these socks.

O'Dowd tried to claim "foul" several times, but his claims were disallowed. He was told to go on and fight.

Wilson was elated at his victory and went over the bout in detail with this writer following the contest. Wilson expressed himself as follows:

"I punched O'Dowd into an almost helpless condition. In the 12th round he was ready to quit after I crashed a heavy left-hand smash to his body. On several occasions during the contest the challenger made a claim of foul to the referee after I rocked him with deadly wallops to the body.

"I fought the battle according to plan. I jabbed Mike with my right until I finally had him blinded from blood flooding from a wound I opened under his left eye. When I got O'Dowd in a state where he didn't know whether he was dodging punches or catching flies in a ball game, I walked in close and ripped heavy left-hand smashes to his head and body.

"O'Dowd winced under every left-hand sock to the body. He had a heavy roll of fat around his waist line and he apparently was not in condition to take blows around the mid-section.

SORRY FOR MIKE

"Even in victory I could not help but feel sorry for O'Dowd. He was a great fighter in his day, but his ring star has set. I beat him fairly and squarely in Boston, but he would not admit I was his master and went around the country declaring he had been robbed. He asserted he had been "jobbed" by Referee Hastne McInnis. Maybe O'Dowd will now apologize to McInnis.

"O'Dowd didn't prove much of a sportsman when we weighed in before the mill. He refused to shake hands with me. I overlooked this and when I was awarded the decision after 15 rounds of gruelling battling the first thing I did was to rush to O'Dowd's corner, grasp him by the hand and compliment him upon his work in the bout.

"Mike apparently still believes he is the greatest middleweight in the world for as he pushed his way through the crowd on his way to the dressing room he kept saying, 'I chased him. I chased him.'

"Of course, I am tickled over my great victory. Ever since I first won over O'Dowd there have been persons who have referred to me as a 'cheese champion.' They refused to admit I won the title on my merits. Therefore, you can imagine how elated I was when I trounced O'Dowd before his own crowd with all the conditions of the battle being in his favor.

"I fought a careful, cold-blooded battle. I didn't enter the ring intent upon knocking O'Dowd out. I was satisfied to win on points.

KEPT O'DOWD OFF

"O'Dowd surprised me by his style of fighting in the early part of the tussle. I had expected him to come rushing from his corner like the proverbial lion. Instead he moved forward cautiously trying to find an opening for his celebrated right hand smash. I kept him off balance most of the time by jabbing him with my right. When an opening presented itself I would crash my left to my opponent's body or head. I made a specialty of body smashes as an old-timer like Mike can't take them in the body.

"My two big rounds were the ninth and twelfth. In both of these sessions I had O'Dowd reeling around the ring drunk from punches. He wobbled several times and possibly I could have finished him in either round if I had cared to let drive with an avalanche of blows.

"I was in there to fight 15 rounds, however, and didn't try to make a spectacular ending of the mill.

"O'Dowd's own supporters turned against him in the 12th round. I had weakened him by steady body punishment. In the middle of the 12th session I shot a terrific left-hand wallop to the pit of Mike's stomach. The challenger dropped his hands and cried foul.

"I knew he was quitting. So did the referee, who waved me to go forward. The fans were quick to see that O'Dowd was losing heart for they cheered me to the echo as I ripped more heavy blows to my opponent's body. I took things easy during the last three rounds. I had O'Dowd's left eye opened and scored at will."

Jack Conway will describe the downfall of Johnny Wilson at the hands of Harry Greb in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Fast Field in New Bedford Invitation Golf Tourney

NETTELBLADT DEFENDS TITLE

By BILL GRIMES

New Bedford, Aug. 13—Approximately 200 golfers are playing in the qualifying round of the annual Country Club of New Bedford invitation here today.

Due to the large entry, the committee decided to add an extra flight to the original 16. The field is the largest and fastest in the annals of New Bedford invitation golf. Nettelbladt, who is the defending champion, has a real assignment on his hands. There are six five and under players from the Metropolitan district, including A. F. Kammer, a former New Jersey title holder.

Bill Grimes

There are three potential champions from Rhode Island T. Suffern Tailer, the amateur titleholder of Little Rhody, Read Oxnard and Joe Pezzullo.

Tommy Tailer should qualify this afternoon with Eliot Tabor while Oxnard and Pezzullo should also be under the wire. Tommy Tailer went to the quarterfinals in the New Englands last week at Portland and then jumped to Long Island where he qualified for the amateur championship of New York and went to the semifinals before he was eliminated.

Pezzullo and Oxnard both reached match play at the Portland Country Club and are serious contenders to top the field here.

Bay State Has Strong Entries

Among the Bay State golfers are Chuck Grasse, who was the runner up to Nettelbladt last year, Johnny Merwin, Concord; Leon K. Emerson, Bobby Goodale, Eddie Bustler, A. D. Knight, C. E. Eaton, Joe Fay, Bill Donnelly, Dick Wecunum, Early Vickery, Brice Evans, Grif Fallon, Russ Todd, Dean Baker, Bobby Hopkins, Dr. Daniel J. Kiley, Melville F. Heath, Jr., Dick Rockwell and Ben Neffel.

Against the heavy out of town opposition, New Bedford is banking upon Dave Whiteside, Seth Reese, Jr. and Eliot Tabor to bring the title back home.

Whiteside and Reese have both been victorious in New Bedford invitations and the latter was beaten in the finals two years ago by Joe Morrill.

At 8 o'clock this morning, the first foursome was sent away by Johnny [illegible], the resident professional. In this foursome was Col Tom Campbell, from New Orleans, one of the best senior golfers in the country. Due to the large field, the committee is somewhat worried as to whether or not the entire field will be able to qualify today.

The starting times have been all assigned but the post entries must be taken care of and it will be a close call if they all manage to get in their entire round.

Qualifiers Will Have to Shoot Under 78

The course is in fine condition. Some of the fairways are burnt but the greens are excellent and it is unlikely if 78 a make the championship flight.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

We have studied the details of the correct back swing with the irons and now, if you make this swing as I have outlined, your forward swing will be greatly simplified. You start forward with the arms and hands first, which of course means the club first. Since your wrists were "drawn up" at the top of the back swing, be in no haste to let them out. You save this action for the lower arc of the forward swing. Here, as the clubhead nears the ball, you let your arms straighten out and, at the same time, your wrists follow suit, so that the clubhead swings right in and through. This is the action that yields smart crispness to iron shots. After you master this action you can emphasize the wrist action into the ball, but do it on a highly restricted basis or you will find yourself pressing again. In this action a little goes a great ways. It's always a question whether you want to add any power here or just let your wrists work of themselves. Experience gives you your answers.

New York, Aug. 13—The New York State athletic commission refused to sanction a match here between Al Singer, lightweight champion, and Jimmy McLarnin, leading contender for the welterweight crown. No Charge to Players in Hearst Junior Tourney

A large number of the 175 entries in the second William Randolph Hearst junior golf tournament have made inquiries regarding green fees and practice for the coming tournament which takes place at the Wollaston Golf Club, East Milton, starting August 25.

There will be no green fee nor other charge of the nature taxed on the junior golfers. And too, there will be no days set aside in order that the working linksmen can get in a practice round.

The Wollaston Golf Club and the Boston Evening American have cooperated so that there will be no charge to the young golfers. If they want caddies they can bring them along or hire them at the club. And they'll have to furnish all their own equipment.

This tournament was primarily arranged to give the young golfers of New England a chance to get into tournament play without the expense. And, consequently, it will cost the lads nothing.

Because of the generosity of the Wollaston Golf Club in loaning the facilities of their layout for the benefit of the junior golfers in the height of the golf season, it is impossible to add another day for practice.

The Wollaston officials would like nothing better than to do this, but it has a large roster of club members who play daily. And a day without a round of golf would be considered lost.

Following is the first group of entries in the tournament:

Stanley Neptune, East Weymouth.
Robert Gordon, Boston.

Women Hold School of Politics

Republican Club in Drive for Big Vote at Primaries; Jamboree on Saturday

A summer school of politics is being conducted by the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts to acquaint Bay State Republican women, before the primaries, with the necessity of voting.

To this end, Mrs. Nelson W. Howard, former political director of the club, and past president of the Professional Women's Clubs, has been touring the Cape Cod district, holding sessions in town halls and improvised meeting places, all to the common goal of "getting out the vote."

On Friday she is to speak before a group of women at Hyannis, under the Republican Women's Club auspices. Her itinerary is scheduled almost until the primaries take place.

Republicans from all over the State, men as well as women, are focusing their attention on next Saturday's political jamboree at Salem Willows when leaders and candidates for office will tell their stories to those who, in turn, will spread the gospel of Republicanism.

Governor Allen is to be one of the principal speakers. The outdoor rally is to be conducted jointly by the Women's Republican Club, the Business and Professional Women's Republican Club and the Republican State Committee.

An event of paramount social importance in the national convention of the American Legion Auxiliary which convenes Oct. 6, will be the Fidac breakfast, an affair which gives promise of drawing to its festive boards women of world prominence and royal birth.

Special guests are to be the international head of Fidac, Madame Mazaraki of Poland and her predecessor, the Princess Cantacuzens of Rumania; Lady Edward Spencer Churchill, first international president; Mrs. Adeline MacCauley of Menominee, Michigan, the only American woman so far to hold the office of international vice-president. Mrs. Winifred May, Bridgewater, is local chairman of the Fidac breakfast. Mrs. Joseph Thompson, Beaver Falls, Pa., widow of General Thompson, will be hostess.

Younger Sports Turn Out in White

By ANN ARDEN

—Boston Evening American Staff Photo.

Model from Conrad & Co.

(ANN ARDEN broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

ANN ARDEN urges her readers to view the HEARST METROTONE NEWS FILM at the State Theater all this week, in which AMOS PARRISH, the fashion expert, shows the accepted fall fashions. Authentic versions of the silhouette, materials, colors and accessories will be shown.

THE VOGUE is white for the younger sporting set. For outings of all kinds, smart children of both sorts wear white, in cottons, linens and sweater knit. Some are white from top to toe. Others are browned a bit—in footwear and accessories, and in complexion, of course.

WHETHER IT is little golf, tennis, sailing, a picnic, outdoor ping pong or croquet, white is the chic, cool choice. The style starts at babyhood and doesn't end at all; for white, of course, is right for all this year.

IN A RECENT party of four engaged in the wholesome delights of croquet, a game which even grown-ups do not scorn in this great play season, a small brother and sister coming up over a mound in the lawn were frocked and suited in the approved brother-and-sister fashion. Their sporting outfits were of that very sheer, cool material, handkerchief linen. The trimmings were identical. Both outfits were piped in blue, to match blue eyes, and small blue socks in small white slippers.

OLDER BROTHER and sister disdain to look alike. They had come to the age that wishes to express its own individuality. Big brother felt, oh, much superior to a sister only slightly younger. Sister had her own ideas on brothers who think they know it all, whether it is a matter of clothes or croquet.

* * *

HOWEVER, these two who may have come to "words", (only mild, of course) before the game was over, agreed on linen's suitability for any active occupation during summer. The girl wore oyster white linen with small trimming touches of brick red linen. The boy was proud of white linen knickers, a white sweater with colored bands and white wool golf socks. His beret was white.

* * *

THE OUTFIT pictured gives a hint of fall—a double-breasted blazer jacket, fastened with brass buttons, and adorned with large patch pockets, worn over a sleeveless linen sports frock and topped by a vivid red beret, matching the coat. A necklace of deep pink coral adds chic.

HOW DELICIOUSLY SMOOTH!

THERE'S a reason why Jersey Ice Cream is so smooth—several reasons, in fact. First its richness in butter-fat, the purity of all ingredients used. Then the process—a new, highly-developed process that breaks up cream globules into smaller and still smaller globules until the cream mixture is smooth as velvet. Pure, rich and wholesome, Jersey Ice Cream is always served at its best in triple-seal bricks or sanitary factory-filled packages.

DOUBLING for LOVE

by WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Judy Resents Name Kit Calls Her

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Judith Archer is a country school teacher, 22 and good looking. She wants to be a college professor, while her mother would like her to go on the movies. But Judy lived a double life. She becomes interested in the story of a jewel robbery in London. She goes to New York and calls on Capt. Charley Marconi. He suggests Judy and her mother take a trip with him. She takes passage on Capt. Charley's ship for her mother and herself and draws all her money from the bank. Judy finds herself looking for the radio operator with the sea-green eyes—but he does not remember her at first. Then they spend hours together. Judy stumbles on a mystery at Halifax, and gets acquainted on the ship, with one of the actors.

CHAPTER 19

The Mohawk was entering the Gulf now, running into a disturbed, chopped sea. The "Radiogram," Kit Camp's little mimeographed newspaper, told this morning of heat in Boston and people flocking to the beaches, panting through tormented days and nights. But here on the ship people hovered about steampipes and women wore fur coats as they buried themselves under the robes in their deck chairs.

Far away to port a grayness flung itself at the sky; it drew out to meet them as the ship turned and became a lofty and forbidding shore line.

"Cape Breton Island," said Mr. Tennant. "It isn't really so gloomy, Miss Judy—not so bad as it seems. But here—take a look at the land where fogs are born."

Ship Rolls

Many Flee Deck

Mr. Tennant adjusted his field glasses, gave them over with a twirl. The rail was rising and falling against the horizon, moving up and down in the rhythmic sureness of a clock pendulum. Even while Judy focused the glasses a woman nearby cried:

"Heavens—can't stand this—" and ran for her cabin.

A tumbling mass of silver—each wave a little volcano smoking at the peak—winds that came from between the stars to howl eternally—such was this place near the top of the world.

Top of the world! Judy let go the morning down the furious winds, shivered all over with rapture.

The glasses picked out something on the northeast—she thought it a fog bank.

"Whitey! I suppose winter disputes old Neptune for rulership of this waste, Mr. Tennant."

"But that's not waste, Miss Judy; it's Newfoundland. Quite a lovely place, indeed once you've passed the coast. Though the ocean's prettier still on Norway. You must visit Newfoundland; you and your mother."

A meaning look at Ma Archer his blue eyes deepening, lingering on Peggy's laughing, pretty face.

Peggy in Love!

Judy Has Pang

A queer little pang shortened Judy's breath, set her slumping back in the chair, chin tucked into the robe. She'd felt this way—was it so strange that Peggy might fall in love? Forty-two—why, that was only about half a life time; shockingly old forty-ten seemed when you were twenty-two. But from the other side of the road—

Grandma Archer was seventy-two; Grandma Archer perhaps looked upon Peggy as a mere chit of a thing. Long life before Peggy . . . Judy hadn't thought of that; when she snipped about preaching dignity, begging Ma to snub old Peter Bontell, this one and that other one who gave her soft glances, she had regarded Ma as far past the age of fairy imaginings.

Perhaps Ma had dream of her own? A mad and merry and flaming life like the other Judys? Ah—tragedy—that you looked into the eyes of those you loved touched their hands treasured their happiness in your heart of hearts—and lived separated from them as by distances greater than spaces between the worlds!

"Sea winds," Judy's whisper was velvet to her own ears. "Top of the world—these teach you things."

A first taste of life sting'ng at her lips. Well, she would stop hoping Peggy. Life wasn't all bleak dignity. Life could swirl

Letters of Ollie Garrett to His Old Pal, Win Brooks

(As quite a change from the usual daily quota of bills, the following letters, signed with Mr. Garrett's name, were received by Mr. Brooks today. They will be submitted to four handwriting experts, and in case of a tie will go to the Dead Letter Office.)

Nome, Alaska, Aug. 11

Dear Old Pal Win—Well, Win, I suppose you will be rather surprised to hear from me way up here and you may be pleased because you are the first newspaperman I have written to. I am having a fine time and wish you were here.

I am driving the sled mail for Uncle Sam up north of fifty-three. It is a quiet life but there are a few speakeasies along the trail and if I can get out of the habit of knocking down the doors I think things will be jake.

I have a great team of huskies and we always get the mail through. You know, Win, that is the slogan of the mail; we say "The mail must go through," and the mail must go through, blizzard or no.

The dogs eat frozen fish. How is the old gang? Do you ever see Damon or Joe or Bill?

Win, I want you to spike a couple of false reports for me in the first place I never went away with no women. I'm married and you're married and no (misspelled) how a rumor like that, reaching the ears of the little woman might arouse unwarranted suspicion. I went away alone and I'm going to stay alone up in these great white wastes and icy tundras. That is the way we say it up here.

The second thing is that story I was afraid Judge Dillon (spelled correctly) would give me a long stretch in the jury found me guilty. I know I would have got a fair trial and square trial from Judge Dillon and I am sorry if I spoiled his vacation. There are a lot of nice places up here and if he wanted to let bygones be bygones I would be glad to have him as my guest for say a week or 10 days.

Well, Win, I may be caught some day or I may give myself up. Have you ever thought about giving yourself up? For the time being I will ring off (because the huskies are anxious to be up and away and the mail must get through. Give me regards to Bill, Freddy, Gene and the rest. From

(Signed) OLIVER B GARRETT.

P. S.—The plumbing up here is terrible.

Palomas, Malay Archipelago,
August 11.

Old Pal Win—Well, Win, I suppose you will be rather surprised to hear from me so quick way down here, but the truth is the dogs give out on me at Nome and I had to pack the mail on my back 40 miles along the trail because the mail must get through no matter if you get pneumonia. I got it and the doctor had a lot of X-ray plates made and said I better get pensioned from the postoffice.

So here I am, and you are the first newspaper man I have written to from here. I have got a job as a diver on a pearling lugger (misspelled) but I do not know how it will turn out.

The captain asked me did I have experience and I said I had taken more dives than any other man in Boston or Phil Boott and he said that entitles you to a great deal of considerations but you must not swallow the pearls under water. So I asked him how I could swallow the pearls under water without drowning and he said I have heard of you before, there is a picture of you on a tree at the beach at Fiji.

Well, I do not know how I will like it yet because they have a lot of gin down here and I may have to organize a raid.

Besides, the other divers say these waters are infested with sharks and big lobsters and octopuses. By the way, how are all the boys at home?

Win, there are a few things in the papers that I would like to openly deny. (Infinitives are split both ways at Palomas.) In the first place, I never and that Hultman was a smart guy, because I think Wilson was a whole lot smarter but a genius that was not appreciated.

And another thing is I want to deny that I was seen blueberrying at Medway. Anybody who says I was is a plain liar. I have not gone blueberrying at Medway or anywhere else. People have come to me and said, Ollie, will you go blueberrying and I have always said no. I always tried to live an upright, honest life in Boston and always shunned anything that would put me in a bad light and that is what it gets you, that you are seen blueberrying at Medway! You cannot make my denial on this too strong.

Well, Win, they are getting steam up on the lugger and we are heading for the dives. I only hope Joe Mender has a place around here. I must ring off because the crew is getting up a chantey and want to cut me in. Give my regards to Cockinos and Sidlinger and Dan. From

(Signed) OLIVER B GARRETT

P. S.—The plumbing here is worse than in the frozen north.

Paget West, Bermuda, Aug 11

Win, Old Pal—Well, Win, I suppose you will be rather surprised to hear from me way over here so quick, but you are the first newspaman I have written to from this place.

I will tell you why I left Palomas. We got out to the pearling grounds on the lugger (misspelled) and the captain said, Garrett, you will dive first. So I dove and took a belly-flapper and came up and said I do not see no pearls. Don't be mad, it is oysters you are after man. I said oysters and he said yes. Captain, I said, what month is this? He said August, you fool. Is they an R in August, I said. No, says he. Well, says I, up in Boston we have a law you can take no oysters in mon'hs without R. It was easy to see they were breaking the law, so I came away. You know, Win, I cannot afford to be mixed up in anything like that.

Well, this is a nice place and there are certainly a lot of good horses here but I have not driven them yet because I have not located a good X-ray doctor. The sun is pretty hot here and I go swimming every day at Elba. The Pritn brothers have got the biggest wholesale liquor place in town with about a million bottles all over the shelves. Boy, how I would like to get loose in there with the old crew!

The papers have said one or two things about me that I wish you would correct, because I would not want to get a bad name down here. In the first place I never sent any carrier pigeon to the Old Granary burying ground with a note razzing the cops. God bless the cops, I always say. And besides I am not corresponding with dead ones.

And another thing I want you to know that my old pals would arrest me if they saw me. It would be their duty and I would report them to the commissioner if they didn't.

Well, if I can get a good wagon cheap I am seriously considering opening up a milk route down here. I have been canvassing the district and there looks like some good prospects, only of course, as I said before, they don't have prohibition.

Bermuda is the most wonderful climate in the world, they say, and besides there are no wild animals like you find over in Africa and no pussies only a tarantula once in a while. By the way, how is the gang getting along back home?

Tell Mulhern and Foley that I will be back some day, because I am going to tell my story in the courts and vindicate myself. And tell Manfredonia not to worry about the $12,000 bail. If I'm not, he shouldn't. Does Sullivan look as well as he did?

Well, that ring off now, but I will write you later. Do not be surprised if I am not invited to accept in the second session of Suffolk Superior Criminal court. Give my regards to the Duke. From

(Signed) OLLIE

P. S.—There is no plumbing at all here.

Parking on Summer st from Washington to Arch on the one side, and from Washington to Chauncy on the other was banned in the Traffic Commission's district from 7 A. M. to 6 P. M. today.

Following a week's observation of conditions on Summer st, Deputy Supt. John F. Hurley of the traffic bureau, made the experiment for three days of traffic from South Station to Washington st, and from Arch to Chauncy on the other side.

At noon the Traffic Commission reported that traffic was moving much faster and that pedestrians were now able to watch signals without their view being obscured by parked cars. In all, he declared, the plan had been proven successful.

Commissioner Conry also announced that pending a meeting of the full commission tomorrow the alternate parking rule by which Boylston would run in one direction for thoroughfares to the other will not go into effect until further notice.

STATE FINDS 27 TYPHOID VICTIMS AFTER TROLLEY PICNIC

PAIR OF FARM HOSTS HAD DISEASE

Suspects Under Observation as Effort Is Made to Check Outbreak

The number of typhoid victims resulting, it is claimed, from a picnic of employes of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Co., at Saxonville, was placed at 27, today, by Dr. Clarence L. Scamman, head of the communicable diseases division of the State Department of Public Health.

The victims live in Boston, Newton, Natick, Norwood, Waltham, Bedford, Arlington, Lexington, Hopkinton, Wellesley, Framingham, Wayland, Maynard and Belmont.

Dr. Scamman stated that at least two individuals living at the farm where the picnic was held had typhoid prior to July 29, when the picnic was held.

The water supply is being examined in connection with a state investigation.

Dr. Scamman said [illegible] investigation to date shows two at least 27 who attended the picnic either have or are suspected of having typhoid fever.

"Whether or not water, milk or some article of food served at the picnic was the vehicle of infection has not yet been determined," he said.

However, there is evidence that at least two individuals living on the farm where the picnic was held, had typhoid fever prior to July 29.

An examination of the water supply at the farm is being made and further investigation by personal visits to individuals [illegible] tended the picnic are being conducted to determine if anyone who attended it fell ill and drank the [illegible] narrowly.

These investigations are being done by the following representatives of the State Department of Public Health: Dr. Ralph F. Wheiler, epidemiologist; Dr. Charles R. Mack and Dr. R. C. Archibald, State district health officers.

It was stated at Dr. Scamman's office that William H. Wilson of 89 Kaposia rd., Auburndale, superintendent of the Auburndale division of the railway, and John A. Campbell of 394 Western rd., Wellesley, another executive, are in Newton hospital suffering from mild infections of typhoid.

$20,000 Additional for Waltham Needy

Increased demands upon the funds of the Waltham public welfare department for public relief led the [illegible] council to appropriate $20,000 additional for the purpose for the remainder of the year.

The department requested $30,000 and the mayor reduced the sum to $25,000. Then the city council cut the amount to $20,000.

Harvard Hids Perseid Meteor Party

HOW METEORS TURN TO DUST in rare atmosphere is shown by this sketch. Note that at 70 miles up they start burning and in 15 miles drop are but dust.

THE ANNUAL SHOWER OF PERSEIDS this year failed to come up to expectations. Ordinarily the meteors can be seen by naked eye, but according to Dr. Willard J. Fisher, the brightness of the moon makes this practically impossible. Thus the large telescope, at which Dr. Fisher is shown, was used. Scores gathered at the Harvard Observatory for the display.

COURT HOLDS 2 IN BEATING OF MAN TO DEATH

John and Martin Donahue, clerks, of Harvard st., Cambridge, charged with murder in the death yesterday of Allen T. McPherson, 29, as the result of a brutal beating he received for assisting a police officer, were held without bail for hearing on Aug. 20, by Judge Wolcott in Eastern Middlesex District court today.

On the night of August 4, Patrolman William Anderson of the Central sq. station was experiencing difficulty with Patrick Fitzpatrick of Columbia st., that city, whom he had arrested at the corner of Main and Windsor sts.

A group of rowdies attempted to interfere with Anders[illegible] when McPherson, the [illegible] children, stepped in. When they reached the police box at Main and Portland sts., McPherson opened it and sent a call for the patrol wagon. James Ward of 56 Plymouth st., East Cambridge, also aided the officer.

2 ARRESTED IN ROXBURY RAID

A Roxbury speakeasy, where Oliver B. Garrett was reported a visitor last Friday, was raided today by police, who seized—six gin rickeys.

The raiding squad of five, led by Sergt. William J. Harrow on orders of Deputy Superintendent McDevitt, found the rickeys all set up on the bar beside a plentiful supply of limes, lemons and cracked ice.

One member of the squad earlier had purchased a half-pint, and in consequence Edward O'Connor of Dacia st., Roxbury, was arrested for illegal sale. Another man was arrested on suspicion.

The speakeasy is reported to be conducted by a close friend of the defaulting former liquor raider.

CATCH METEOR WITH CAMERA

A meteor of unusual brilliance was observed and photographed at the Harvard Observatory Monday night, Dr. Willard J. Fisher, meteor expert at the observatory, reported last night.

The path of the meteor was from east to north.

The photograph shows only a thin line about an inch long. But from this line, which was taken by a camera pointed toward the Perseids region and set for a time exposure of about an hour, Dr. Fisher has learned several particulars from the photograph. It shows that the meteor had a long tail and that it exploded at the end.

The expected display of Perseid meteors proved a fizzle and watchers were much disappointed. Few saw any meteors in any part of the sky.

KEEPERS AT THE FRANKLIN PARK ZOO reported Stanley, the crane, shown here, as enjoying yesterday far better than he did the hot days of last week. This crane, named after the great African explorer, is one of the two cranes recently given to the zoo officials by Park Commissioner William P. Long. It was found in Africa. (Staff photo.)

For the fourth time in as many weeks, the editor has been told of the arrival of twins. George Otis of 115 West Glendale st., Hyde Park, called Liberty 4000 and asked for the news tip editor.

"I am the father of two sets of twins and I would like to enter in the news tip contest."

URGE SURPLUS GRAIN FOR CHINA

Letter Comes for Clement A. Norton in a Letter to Alex Legge, chairman of the U. S. Farm Board at Washington today again urged Mayor James M. Curley's suggestion that surplus wheat be sold to China.

Referring to Chairman Legge's suggestion, Chancellor Norton says: "President Hoover headed a commission that distributed food to starving Russians after the World War. His emissaries went into Russia as far as the Ural Mountain territory and the Orenburg area. Surely even the Tibet and Turkestan sections of China hold no more obstacles than do these areas.

"Our auto truck manufacturers would co-operate to push trucks with food through the worst of roads and swamps. A grateful China, rescued from starvation, will later pay the bill. While rice may be the staple food and not wheat, a starving people will be glad to get wheat."

MISS HARD-BOILED by Jane Dixon

Raquel Plans to Prevent Pancho From Taking Part in Raid

CHAPTER 66

Raquel soon found, however, that getting Pancho out of Hermosa was not to be as easy as she planned.

"I can't do it," he growled when little Jose's message had dragged him, reluctantly, from Keno Pete's.

"Ant father, I need you," Raquel insisted.

"Yes," he snarled, the hot tequila stirring the smouldering coals in him to crackling flame. "And we've needed you too, these two years, your mother and me. We could put here, for all you cared."

She strove to hold the temper that rose within her. She was, in many ways, she knew, her father's daughter.

"I came as soon as I was in a position to do something real," she flared. "You owe it to yourself, to all of us, to get away from this."

"Was a time when I'd not know what I owe this family," he roared. "A pretty pickle you left us in when you threw down Bill Johnson. I've not paid him back yet—the money I borrowed from him. Never can pay him. Unless this deal I have on now works out the way I think it's going to."

"Deal?" Raquel asked.

Pancho's Deals
Raquel Knew Them

She knew Pancho's "deals." They were made in the dark of the night in that shack with the barred windows and closed blinds. They were sealed by words from loose lips over reeks of tequila — with renegades, peons, men who were "wanted" by the authorities, expatriates with a price on their heads across the border. They were Pancho's partners in his dark "deals."

"I'll see you get the money to pay Johnson," she said.

"Oh, you will, huh?" Pancho hellowed. "Since when did you get so generous? Rolling in wealth, and letting your own flesh and blood make the best of a bad bargain? Maybe you think I'm a quitter, a filthy deserter, like some others I could mention."

"Take care," Raquel's voice was like a rapier—steel cold, blade-sharp. Oh heavens, if only Jerry were here!

"Don't put on your airs with me, my lady. I got my friends in this deal, and I'm going to stick by them. One little ride and Pancho Rojas won't have to worry. He'll be able to buy this dirty town and burn it up for a bonfire."

So that was it. Pancho and his gang were on the eve of another one of those mysterious rides across the border. There would be coarse oaths, shouts, the bark of guns, red hands, the pounding hoofs of the rurales in pursuit.

This time, she was sure, they would get Pancho. Her woman's intuition told her as much. And she was, she knew prescient in these things.

Her father a common bandit! No, not her father. The man who had been her father. The man the tequila and the knawing hatred of those he believed responsible for his fall from big estate had made into a beast. The beast was the night-rider, the plunderer, the avenger of a fancied wrong against his youth.

Jerry, too, would suffer. The shame of it! And Jerry so wanted to help.

She must find some way. Pancho must not cross the border on this shameful adventure. Capture, the end of the road, awaited him there.

Was it possible that not longer than a week ago she had been Mrs. Gerald Parker? Living in the fabulously appointed apartment of a luxurious hotel in a great city? Her slightest wish a command? Going to dances with Jerry and his friends, who had received her gladly—admired her extremely, as the wife of Gerald Parker, beautiful and pampered and adored.

No. She was Raquel Rojas—Pancho's girl. Unless she could snatch this great bellowing lion of a Pancho from the jaws of his own blind folly and hate.

"There's no use reasoning with him, she's like this," she told herself. "And he'll be worse. He always is just before one of these 'deals.' He whips himself into a fury. I can't give him up. If I could make him suspect, though——"

She turned and walked rapidly into the small box of a room that was once hers. A thought had occurred to her. She must gestate it, try to form it into a working plan.

"If I could deliver a warning to him," she figured rapidly. That he was being watched. That his slightest move would bring the end for all of them. It would have to come from a source he could not question, though. He would laugh at rumors."

With Money
May Save Pancho

She paced back and forth in the cramped room like a trapped creature—her black eyes wide, aflame. Her scarlet lips in little gale now—drawn back from her blue-white teeth.

One of the gang? They could be reached only through money—any one of them. But they could not be trusted, even when bought. They would take the money and use it to defeat her.

The warning must come from someone who had nothing to do with their stupid and dangerous "deals"—someone she could trust, someone Pancho knew and had reason to believe would be interested in keeping him alive and free.

Suddenly she stopped her pacing and listened. Pancho was at the table, guzzling great cups of hot coffee. From a peg on the wall she took a cloak of her mother's, a scant black garment of cheap cloth. Making certain Pancho's back was toward her, she slid stealthily out of the shack. She was going to find Bill Johnson.

Running rather than walking—dusk had settled and she would not be observed—she reached the end of the dusty little lane. She slackened her pace only long enough to ask a man scuffling through the dirt in front of Bill Johnson's house, then followed the line of his pointing finger. She would know that house when she came to it.

The line led in a direction opposite to that where Johnson had planned to build the stone house by the river. Bill had changed his luck. Those honeymoon acres for Lilly and then for her, Raquel, had brought him ill fortune.

By and by she paused before a square frame structure with a piazza running along three sides of it. An oil lamp, the ornate globe blackened with smoke, shone through an uncurtained window. She saw Anna bending over a thick white tortilla she was holding in her arms. Anna's child, that was not quite right in its poor little head. She did not see Bill, but the woman with the bundle in her arms to answer her soft but imperative knock.

The woman, seeing this ghost from out her past, this blinding-ly beautiful woman in the gemmed hands that reached for her and the shining, seeking eyes, clutched the bundle to her breast and staggered backward against the table.

"Tortia come—for Bill," she whimpered

"Yes, Anna, yes," cried Raquel, a fury of purposeful design. "Where is he, Anna?"

Whereupon Anna set up such a blubbering and wailing that Johnson, dosing in the room above, came clumping hastily down the stairs.

Maps

Always I have loved them,
Maps of every hue;
Green for Spain and England,
Purple for Peru.

Little have I wandered
On the seas I love;
But the maps bring visions
And my heart above.

There is one I cherish
More than all the rest,
With a golden island
On the far sea's breast

With a golden island,
Nameless, kissed by spray,
Seas all blue around it,
Continents in gray.

Were I free to wander
To that nameless isle
Would it still be golden,
Still my dreams beguile?

What's in Fashion?

Back-to-School Clothes

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—Don't tell the school board—but teacher's not going to be a bit smarter than her pupils this fall—no matter how many imposing letters she has after her name!

Not when it comes to clothes, anyway.

When it comes to dressing sensibly, comfortably and in a way that's good to look at the 6-to-19-year-olders can teach folks a lot.

Of course they'll start out in their Summer tubbables for the first warm days. The little girls is gay printed broadcloths or linens. Or plain pastels to match their bright eyes and pink cheeks. Middies and skirts, maybe—they're so practical!—or bloomer dresses.

The little bove in tub suits, too. Shirts and shorts of linen or khaki or sturdy cottons.

But the new fall clothes are so chic looking! Can't blame the youngsters if they want to put them on right away.

For some of the small girls' dresses have been looking more and more like older girls' dresses. This year they've hit exactly the right combination. More "style" in them . . . but not a bit less youthful charm.

Lots of little girls are suddenly finding they have waistlines. Not so well defined as a grown-up's—and not quite so high up. But a waistline, nevertheless.

Belts mark the spot. Belts of the dress material, or belts of patent leather in black or brown to match the shoes. The belted dress replaces the perfectly straight hanging one.

And below these belts, some skirts have decided to flare a bit. Pleats help to do it . . . or slightly circular tendencies.

White touches on a dark dress are a favorite adult fashion. So they are for children. And collars and cuffs of pique are one of the smartest ways to do it.

There are yeated effects made by stitching. Surplice effects that button down the side. And plain't a cute looking little girl anywhere who won't look cuter if she wears the fashionable miniature replica of his grown-up's bolero.

What Fabrics?

Jersey is a favorite material for all three dresses. It's durable . . . comfortable . . . and easily cleaned. Wool crepes are doing exciting things in youthful fashions. And every mother knows how practical the fashionable twills and reps are.

Separate skirts are always a handy solution to the school clothes problem. Especially when a blouse is on and the sweater can be pulled off.

And if you want to please that young critic of yours, yes-mess her for one of the leather jackets that are so popular. Shall it be rik it just about the grandest thing she ever had.

What Will Boys Wear?

Button-on suits with jersey or tweed shorts and cotton shirts are a great invention for a small boy. He likes the feeling of wearing trousers and a shirt—like Dad. Mother knows the trousers are so easy because they button onto the waist. And that the shirt can be quickly detached for the laun-dry. Jumper jersey suits are fine for school.

Sweaters. They have sweaters like Dad that make a little chap feel very athletic. And for a bit more formal wear, the Eton suit with collarless jacket that comes under the blouse collar—is always a good choice.

The sketches from top to bottom . . . show how a little girl wears a bolero, the sweater suit for a small boy; a leather jacket and plaid skirt; a belted, flared skirt dress; and the popular button-on suit for boys.

among policy holders of several insurance companies. The first quarterly report of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for the year 1930, shows the best condition of health among its 19,000,000 industrial policy holders for any similar period of any previous year.

That the first quarter of 1930 has been an improvement over this period last year is evidenced by the absence of epidemics. In 1929 influenza was prevalent and health conditions in the country were the worst experienced in a decade.

The statistics on deaths from tuberculosis for the first quarter of 1930 are encouraging. The death rate from this disease showed the sharpest drop of any disease, the mortality among the [illegible] population having been 85.2 per 100,000. This is a reduction of 10.2 per cent from the lowest previous figures for the first quarter of any year. Among the Negro population the death rate from tuberculosis for this quarter was 207.8 per 100,000, a drop of 4.6 per cent.

Most of the principal childhood diseases have shown reduces death rates as compared to the same period for 1928 and 1929. Scarlet fever was an exception in this respect.

It is a happy thing for all of us that the scientific world is at work on means of bettering the public health. The report I have quoted gives us courage.

A—This is probably due to cracking joints, due to lack of synovial fluid. Massage the parts with warm cod-liver oil at night before retiring.

D. B. Q—What diet do you advise for reducing?

A.—Eat sparingly of starches sugars and fats. For further particulars send self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

D. K. Q. What causes cold sores on the lips?

A—This is usually due to acid in the system caused by faulty and poor elimination.

EVERY BRIDEGROOM is just a "jay-walker" on the Primrose Path.

Nothing not even a tight shoe or an unimpressive man—can make a woman suffer like an unbecoming hat.

Probably, the average man broadcasts his overmaking these days, because he thinks it is a shame that only one woman should enjoy the "higher education" of listening to such an ardent lover.

The man who tries to drive a car with one arm and make love with the other is either too luminarily to be trusted, or too skillful to be convincing.

The tragedy of a woman's life is that she is constantly finding a man who is "different," only to discover that he's "just like all the rest."

Sometimes, a man actually enjoys doing the things that are good for him; but they don't give him half the thrill that they would if they were labeled "Dangerous" or "Keep Off."

Divorce may sometimes be a necessary surgical operation; but like most surgical operations, it leaves a scar—and you are SO long recuperating from the effects of the shock and the anaesthetic.

A wife is the "innocent bystander," who always gets hit, when her husband starts fooling with fire-arms, or experimenting with his "deadly fascination" for the tender sex.

The modern girl's notion of an ideal husband appears to be one who is perfectly satisfied with a cold-cereal breakfast, a cafeteria lunch and a tin-can dinner.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

AT THE first sign of wrinkles there should be a daily routine of oiling and ice rubs. Use a heavy cream at night after the face has been washed with pure soap and water. Every morning apply astringent and then ice.

Watch the heels of house slippers. They should have new tops now and then the same as walking booties. Run-over heels throw the foot out of alignment, make tops sag, produce ingrowing nails and weaken the ankles. Old shoes are a menace to foot health, though everybody loves them and hates to put them as an old cat hangs over her kittens.

The right kind of complexion powder will produce an appearance of freshness. It should not be too pink, and work well with the dull finish on the nose when the powder pad carries a light load. Don't forget the lobes of the ears which should have a faint touch of rouge if coloring is applied to the cheeks and chin.

Men have better complexions than women because they have oily skin or enlarged pores. What's the explanation? There are two good guesses. Men get more exercise than women, which means that the digestive organs perform their work more normally, and the elimination of body waste is active. Second reason: They have cleaner skins, they lather their faces every day and scrape off dirt as well as whiskers. A good frisky facial scrubbing stimulates the functions of the skin, tones the tissues, sets the blood streams galloping. Some complexions will not accept soap, but the average one is benefited by its daily use.

Youngster's Birthday Party

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

My little daughter's age [illegible] have a birthday party soon [illegible] and I have about [illegible] and I find my dining room [illegible] accommodate them. But [illegible] I have thought of substituting five or six small tables in the sitting room, and am wondering if and where I could place the birthday cake. Would it look well to place the birthday cake in the center of the dining room table and have the usual decorations there?

MISS F.

Yes this would be a good idea, of course in this kind of affair when the birthday cake is placed on the table at which the little guests are seated and the guests come in her table and she gives them each a slice.

Wedding Announcements

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

Is it correct to reply, wishing happiness, on receipt of a wedding announcement from one not a close friend." The bride is a "summer acquaintance" and I do not know the groom. If I write a friendly note, should I include "engratulations" to the groom—or just wish them both happiness?

M. J. S.

It is correct to write a brief note of good wishes, but it is not absolutely necessary when one is not known to the bride or groom. A line or two is quite enough to send them best wishes for their happiness.

A Tea of Unquestionable Good Taste

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

Is it proper to give a shower in honor of a bride who was quietly married, without any of her friends knowing anything about her marriage?

If so what do you call the shower?

There wouldn't be any rule about this, of course, but it would seem to me to be better form to give a tea in this case, rather than a shower.

(Mrs Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette by readers.)

Heart and Home

Goes With Other Girls

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am a young girl of 19 and have been going with a boy of 27 for three months. He calls me by letters, me and wishes to present me with an engagement ring in three months. He always talks about marriage to me. Now my trouble is that when he is not out with me he goes out with other girls who live near him.

He has asked me to stay at his house during Brockton Fair. Please help me.

BROWN EYES.

Dear Brown Eyes: I'm sorry that I can't seem to hold out much hope for you. Happiness with a man who has a fifth command of how [illegible] He might change and be happy with just you after you are married, but it hardly seems likely. I'm afraid would be making a mistake to marry him, or to go to his house for your vacation.

Have Fun While You Can

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Since I have been in Boston I have read your Heart and Home column and I found out it helps a lot of girls, so I know you can help me. I'm a country lassie of 18, about 5 feet 6. I have a very pleasing personality. I enjoy all sports. I have hardly ever gone out with a fellow, but during my visit here last year I fell in love with a boy. He paid a lot of attention to me. When September came I went back home. He kissed me goodbye and said he loved me. I thought of him all we [illegible] month and I came home to find him engaged. Should I keep friendship with him? Where I [illegible] have an affair, or should I be too serious indifferent. He [illegible] me in a way but does not with other girls.

LONELY COUNTRY GIRL.

Dear Lonely Country Girl: I don't like the idea of those going to the city for a visit. Just treat them as friends. If you like you may continue to write and perhaps you'll meet some ideals. You are young and can have lots of fun for a few years, so don't feel [illegible]

Act More Friendly

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I met a nice young man Sunday and when he was leaving me he said he would like to see me again. As I have no telephone I promised to call him up. I did not call him up but I met him again. He held out his hand, but I just said "Hello," and walked on. I am sorry I did not stop and talk to him as I like him very much. Kind advice in what to do?

WONDERING.

Dear Wondering—If you like the young man and he seems nice and gentlemanly there is no reason why you shouldn't be friendly to him.

I think you have done. You might almost have given the impression that you don't like him. If you meet him again, why not stop for a word or two and set up an appointment if he asks for one?

Write Again

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I have written to you twice. I would like my answer from my last letter. I would like to see more than my answer in the paper. RITA

Dear Rita—I have no other letter from you in my files. Please write your question again and I will be glad to answer it in the paper.

Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer readers questions regarding love problems which may be troubling them. Write on one side of the paper only.

Child's Growth and How to Plan His Diet

From Martha Lee's Wednesday morning broadcast over WBZ and the Boston Evening American

Martha Lee

WHAT DO you eat for a day? [illegible] How many times a day should a child have meals? These are just a few of the questions that come to mind when [illegible] the problems I had with my own [illegible] food problems but really there wouldn't be so many births in the making if we didn't have a new problem, for almost every day in the week, would suffice.

But we can have too many thrills, as any mother of a large family of small children would testify. It might not cause [illegible] but it is the food budget that is the most [illegible] in many cases. The [illegible] mother is careful [illegible] type of food to buy and where she goes, via eating she will [illegible] to [illegible] food is [illegible] to [illegible] the efficiency of the family does not [illegible] warrant its cost—can I afford not to buy it?"

Butter meat, eggs, fish and cheese, fresh fruit, cream and outdoor vegetables, while very delicious, are expensive and self-denial must often be practiced in their use, serving less expensive substitutes of the more economical foods.

Meat of course affords the protein we need, but it does not always [illegible] but it is well to [illegible] the point of substitutes in the form of meat dishes, such as macaroni, and cheese.

Of each dollar we spend for food the balanced budget calls for 30 cents or less for meat, eggs and cheese, 20 cents or more for fruits and vegetables, 20 cents or more for cereals and breads, 10 cents or less for sugars and fats, and four and the remainder for fuel, light and miscellaneous. Usually we find the average housewife spends far more than her 20 per cent on meats, eggs and fish.

When food problems of this kind are brought to me I immediately think of Farina as one of the best food helps. I wonder if you, as so many other people, think of farina as a trade marked preparation by an individual manufacturing company. Farina is really a raw product obtained in the granule form from certain kinds of hard spring wheat. It is especially rich in mineral and is unusually nourishing, and appetizing. While it can be used as a breakfast food, it has also many other uses, among them serving as a chief ingredient in macaroni and spaghetti—that is, in the kind we use in the Martha Lee cooking at present in my kitchen.

In the New Jersey factory of the manufacturer of this macaroni, special processes of mixing, pressing and drying develop an unusually appetizing flavor for these macaroni products and make them particularly light, fluffy and digestible, at the same time giving those body-building qualities of [illegible]. The interesting thing about these macaroni products is that like potatoes to the family never tires of them, in fact, they come as a welcome substitute for potatoes, especially in warm weather. Plain boiled with plenty of salt, then drained, buttered and served with many kinds of food, such as bacon, mushrooms, tuna fish, frankfurters, oysters, kidneys, chop suey and what not, they are delightfully unusual.

I know I've talked a great many times on the virtues of macaroni and spaghetti, but they are such valuable products from the standpoint of economy, nutrition and digestibility, that I do feel it a duty to bring them to your attention easily and often. I have some especially nice recipes using these that I'll be only too happy to send along.

Precedent Points To Upswing in Prices of Bonds

Conditions Indicate Rise, Russell Leavitt Asserts

—By M. S. Rukeyser—

New York, Aug. 12—Russell Leavitt of Moody's Investors Service, points out that unless all precedent is misleading, the country must be near the verge of a bull market in bonds.

As he puts it, "we have never, since the records were kept, experienced a business recession or depression which has not been followed by an increasing appetite for investment issues and by rising bond prices. And, however brief the argument may be earned on concerning the comparative intensity of the present business reaction in the fact stands out that we are and have been in such a depression and that bond prices are and have been relatively low. Against all precedent, we shall now see a rise."

In bull markets in the past, bonds rose from 4.57 to 20.61 points. The new factor in the present situation is the lingering influence for selected common stocks for long-term investment. Stocks are competing with bonds for the surplus funds of investors yet it is prudent at this time to put a hedge of good bonds in the investor's portfolio.

George M. Verity chairman of the board, American Rolling Mill Company, chided American business men for political sniping at President Hoover.

"Business," he said, "can and will go ahead, and if our citizenship as a whole will but do its part in loyal support of our national administration, with great resources and of our unlimited ability, nothing can stop the tide of our continued progress.

"Every basic national industry is in sound condition and ready to use its production and constructive powers to the limit just as soon as this save receiving but temporary period of adjustment has passed, as it will within a comparatively short period of time.

"Let us get behind our national administration and we will soon be putting ahead as we have never done before."

H. Parker Willis, former secretary of the Federal Reserve Board and present arch critic of the Federal Reserve, points out in an editorial in the Journal of Commerce that there is too much credit in the country, contending:

"There is too much credit in the country today, and it is being used in the wrong manner. It is already recognized that the condition of the banks is worse than it was just before the panic, taking the country as a whole, and while brokers' loans have been reduced in the aggregate they have not greatly increased here in New York. In the endeavor to maintain prices of favorite shares by helping to carry them along, or in the endeavor to prevent favorite investment banking houses from suffering immediate loss, far too much bank credit is being pumped back into the investment field."

Nick H. McCarty, who has been developing a successful grocery chain in the very center of the anti-chain store agitation in Texas explained:

"Propagandists can't hurt our business if customers are consciously treated, get quality goods at reasonable prices, in a clean store, well arranged and with a stock of nationally advertised merchandise. And we must have good window displays."

In the development of chain systems the chief task is the development of successful managers.

In the Sears-Roebuck chain, all but one of the large stores has been successful. The problem has been with the smaller stores, for there has been difficulty in finding men for these posts with moderate salaries who have a known record as profit makers. In developing men from within, there has been some grief. In an analogous problem, that of selecting managers for the Woolworth stores, Hubert T. Parson, president of the F. W. Woolworth Company, told me that he gets very good results from men who have been country merchants. J. C. Penny, in developing managers, has allowed them to become partners of the business.

An executive of one of the big food chains recently said:

"We have been forced to halt our expansion because we haven't the men to manage our business. We have to wait until the organization catches up. We have had to close store after store because the men we sent out to manage them were not able to do so, and re-opened the locations because we had no others to put in their places."

General Foods to Maintain Wages

Ralph G. Coburn, executive vice-president of the General Foods Corporation, yesterday declared that the corporation has not considered any reduction in other wages or salaries of employes, nor is any reduction contemplated.

Employment in practically all of the factories of General Foods, located in 40 cities, is running approximately at normal, Mr. Coburn said.

SPECULATORS STUDY EFFECT OF DROUGHT

By FRANK H. MELOON

Speculators are studying the probable effects of the great 1930 drought. Their conclusions are by no means in agreement. Since attention was called in this column several weeks ago to the increasing importance of the commodities markets, particularly grain, there has been a growing realization in Wall and State Sts. that these factors cannot be ignored.

The betterment of agricultural prices as the result of the raised farm buying power in regions not affected by the drought or loss is seen, but the drought may cause more than proportionate harm in those that are affected directly.

* * *

Harvey S. Firestone, president of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., has been busy this week inspecting the company's plants in Rhode Island. He sees a cheerful outlook for business in the fact that the American people are now consuming more commodities than the nations factories are producing. Firestone has been favorably commented on in a number of investment bankers' reports, Mr. Firestone presents a pleasing industrial picture when he says that company's Akron factories are now operating 24 hours a day six days a week and are still unable to keep up with orders on hand.

H. S. Firestone

For the last reported month, which is June, the United States production of boots and shoes totaled 23,824,911 pairs, a decrease of 2.8 per cent from the 24,512,279 produced in May last and 15.3 per cent from the 28,120,163 produced in June, 1929, it was announced here today.

It is only reasonable to assume that later months will show the beneficial results of the protective tariff granted the leader among New England industries. Holders of leading New England shoe company shares disregard stock market fluctuations and reap the gain year in and year out. This course has proved in most instances not unprofitable.

Potato crop growers are among those who have not shared in the present sustenance, but have settled their own problems as these arose. The price of potatoes has thus well sustained in the face of dropping values for other commodities. Now comes the estimate that this year's potato yield is expected to be 12 per cent under last year's, which does not indicate any problem of overproduction in sight.

Tourists with their eyes open do not need the crop reporting service figures, showing a gain of around 11 per cent in the apple yield, to know that this crop is a big one. Orchards and roadside stands combine in telling the story. Apple orchards used to bear good crops on alternate years, and scientific methods are adopted to equalize the yield but weather continues a dominant factor in raising.

The 1930 farms census shows a reduction of 21 per cent in five years in the number of New England farms. No explanation is given as to what happens to the farms. Certainly one are maintained in operation through mortgages, which are by no means uncommon. New Hampshire leads with a 29.5 per cent decline, according to the Washington figures. This is surprising in view of the great increase in poultry farms in the Granite State. This increase caused that State to figure as the leading shipper to the New York broiler market in the last reported year.

* * *

New England, the birthplace of the telephone, had a total of 1,678,345 telephones served by 167 individual exchanges on June 1 of this year. Massachusetts leads the area with more than half the telephones in New England, a total of 922,562, of which 443,818 are in Metropolitan Boston. Next in Massachusetts comes Connecticut with 237,052, followed by Maine with 141,722, Rhode Island with 126,296, New Hampshire with 86,050, and Vermont with 83,182.

Today's News in Wall Street

The stock market, as noted in this column earlier this week, stands face to face with an important technical test, the outcome of which will be vitally considered by the purely speculative element. Should prices hold at or above the extreme June lows, it will be interpreted as signifying sufficient investment buying is attracted at these levels to resist the continued bear pressure.

Breaking through the June lows would place the market in an uncharted area which, from the technical standpoint, might carry it down to the November, 1928, level, which was the extreme low of the year.

The railroads actually are below last year's bottom prices, but the utilities and the industrials, measured by the popular averages, closed yesterday 28 and 14 points, respectively, above last year's lowest quotations.

VANADIUM BREAKS UNDER PRESSURE

Increased offerings in both Steel and Vanadium as its pool is designated, effected a sharp break shortly after 2. Stock is unlikely to meet substantial buying demand until it gets closer to its year's low.

BETHLEHEM STEEL TO A NEW LOW

New low on present decline was registered in Vanadium as its pool is designated, effected a sharp break shortly after 2. Stock is unlikely to meet substantial buying demand until it gets closer to its year's low.

CASE THRESHING LOW FOR YEAR

Concentrated selling chiefly by a well known bear, broke Case Threshing to a new low. At the present price the stock yields almost 6 per cent and selling at a reasonable ratio to earnings.

MONTGOMERY-WARD REACHES NEW LOW

A newed selling of Montgomery-Ward, driving the stock down to a level where its yield is almost 10 per cent, seemed based on belief the latest turn of events in agriculture may doom the dividend although hope is expressed the directors may continue the payment for another quarter.

ATCHISON DEMAND FOR INVESTMENT

Further decline in Atchison carried it closer to a 5 per cent level, at which increased demand will probably appear from investors.

UNITED AIRCRAFT DECLINES FURTHER

United Aircraft continued in supply and declined under 50. Some speculative buying was attracted in the belief that the aviation industry, in process of readjustment for many months, may be among the first to emerge from the depression.

STEEL COMMON'S WEAKNESS UPSETS

Continued decline in United States Steel is one of the most disturbing factors in the market, since it denotes quite clearly its present apathetic attitude. The corporation's management in its recent statement made it clear the stock is not expected to continue to disclose worth-while improvement. In the meantime the market is attempting to discount the third quarter.

SHORT INTEREST IS EXTENSIVE

Recent aggressive professional selling has resulted in the creation of an extensive short interest in the market. It is estimated that the short interest at present exceeds 5,000,000 shares. A large part of this, it is said, represents a new bear short selling; that is to say operations by the public on the short side at this same time, it is understood, that several of the larger bear operators covered a large part of their lines during the recent weakness and that they are now sitting on the sidelines. One of the most prominent bear plungers is said to be closely watching the commodity situation for a clue as to the immediate course of the market.

BULLS PLAN DRIVE AGAINST BEARS

Important bull operators are planning to initiate a drive against the recently accumulated short interest.

GENERAL MOTORS BETTER SUPPORTED

General Motors is meeting somewhat better support from its sponsors around current levels.

N. J. STANDARD POPULAR MEDIUM

The brisk manner in which this stock has forged to the forefront on every sign of a market upturn, has unsettled the popular trading medium in the position of mark-t bellwether, with the downfall of other one-time indicators. In addition, the more favorable turn which has been noted in the industry of late should stimulate speculative interest in this section of the general list, according to well-informed market observers, and Standard of New Jersey would naturally serve as the pace-setter.

The imposing position of the company in the natural gas field, as well as the potentialities of the hydrogenation process, are expected to be important adjuncts of income during the forthcoming years. Although the annual dividend payment of $2 per share provides but a nominal yield at prevailing levels, interests close to management predict that over a period of time stockholders will be amply rewarded for their patience.

LIQUID CARBONIC FOUND IN FAVOR

The extreme uncertainty surrounding the price movements of the accepted market leaders at the moment, has caused attention to be directed to a number of lesser known issues which are considered conservatively priced, and not so vulnerable to the changing speculative whims. Liquid Carbonic is receiving prominent mention in brokerage circles principally because of the seasonal character of its business with the greater bulk of the profits being derived in the summer months.

Indications are that net income for the twelve month period ending Sept 30th will set a new high record, it is stated, and should equal between $6.50 and $7.00 per share. On the current levels is quoted at approximately nine times the latter figure, while the annual dividend of $4 provides a return of more than 6 per cent.

RADIO CORP. IN ACCUMULATION

Conservative accumulation of Radio Corporation stock is being advised by interests who predict materially higher levels before the close of the year. It must not be forgotten that this issue can move both up and down in either direction.

CANADA DRY DOING WELL

Despite the recession in general business, Canada Dry has been doing well and indications are forthcoming that the net sales this year probably will be in excess of the $10,-514,639 reported for 1929. Reasons for the good business include the hot weather in most parts of the country and the effective advertising of the product. Interests who were prominent in the stock earlier in the year have been doing little or nothing in the past few weeks.

PRICES MIXED IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Prices were mixed in dull trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today after a forenoon session of falling prices. Changes ranged from 1 to 3 points or more. Rifle soared around 3 points.

Edison Electric, which slumped into new low ground on Tuesday, recovered to around 282. One of the soft spots was Brown Durell which recorded a new 1930 low at 4.

First National Stores was firm as was United Shoe. First National enjoyed a profitable June quarter with net of $1,179,297, comparing with $1,168,407 a year ago.

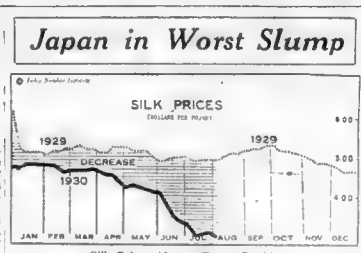
Point or better gains were recorded by Boston & Albany, Utilities Equities preferred, Torrington, Boston Elevated second preferred and Boston & Maine prior preferred.

Stone & Webster dropped over 2 points, New England Telephone dipped a point, as did Public Utility Holdings. Investment trusts were steady to firm.

Industrial conditions in the territory served by Public Service Co of New Hampshire (an Insull property) continue to show marked improvement. Granite quarries are working on full time schedule with two quarries operating night shifts. Shoe factories report more unfilled orders on hand than at any time during the past three months. Furniture factories are working at capacity, according to field reports.

The utility company has extended its field of operation through purchase of Groveton Electric Light Co. and Lyman Falls Power Co. The Groveton unit serves several communities in New Hampshire and Vermont, while the power company operates a hydro station from which power is wheeled to the Groveton Electric and Groveton Paper companies.

Japan in Worst Slump



Silk Prices (Japan Extra Crack)

By HARLOW PETERS
(Irving Fisher Service)

A glance at the chart above gives an irresistible urge to say "Poor old Japan". It is hereby said Japan has been in the throes of its worst business depression, which has extended for more than a year and a half. This has been largely due to the fall in the price of silk; to a year's time silk has dropped from $9 a pound to $3. In other words the silk grower receives only a bit more than half of what he got two years back for the same amount of his product.

The solution, too, is not yet in sight. The heavy increase of the use, of rayon in America has certainly not been calculated to help the silk trade any, and the growers thus have an added problem to face in trying to get their country back on a prosperous basis. It looks as if some of the silk growers will have to go in for a different kind of agriculture.

Warner Financing Over $15,000,000

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—Wall Street understood that the new financing planned by Warner Bros Pictures, Inc., will amount to between $15,000,000 and $22,000,000. The company is understood to have earned approximately $12,900,000, or $4 a share, for the year ending August 31, the bulk of which was earned in the first half.

Owing to the falling off in business during the summer, it has omitted the quarterly dividend of $1, and seeks permanent financing to pay for completion of its expansion program.

One financing plan suggested calls for the issue of rights to purchase 1,000,000 shares of stock at $22 a share.

SOVIET TRADE WITH U. S. UP

Washington, Aug. 13 (INS)—Foreign trade slumps to all principal countries except Soviet Russia were announced by the commerce department today for the first half of 1930.

Russia's requirements of American goods took a remarkable jump from $30,276,000 in the first half of 1929 to $73,231,000 in the same period this year, in spite of the widespread agitation directed at Soviet business in the United States.

The United States also bought more goods from Russia during the period. Imports from the Soviet amounted to $11,211,000, an increase of about $1,000,000.

A number of restrictions were placed against Russian imports, but in each case more than the law was brought up in public hearing the embargoes were lifted.

CURB UTILITY ISSUES HOLD FAIRLY WELL

New York, Aug. 13—Curb stocks suffered from dullness today. Prices were irregular.

Moderate declines of selling and buying of the market leaders kept the movement confused. There was moderate activity for the decline during the first hour, but it was not sustained, and the tone improved somewhat.

Leading utilities were fairly steady. Electric Bond and Share was depressed to a new low for the movement below 73, where it found support and worked back above the opening quotation, only to be dropped slightly.

American Superpower, United Gas, Utilities Power and Light and Niagara Hudson Power were fairly stable.

Oils were mixed. Cosden Oil was soft, declining about 3 points, and was followed by Richfield and Gulf Oil. Cities Service moved within a narrow groove. Vacuum and Standard of New York Stocks were steady.

Investment and Holding Company shares were dull. Goldman Sachs and Shenandoah holding stocks ran through a fairly firm.

Pond of England was a strong spot in the industrial group and soon rallied about a point.

$125,414,275 for Aug. Bond Payment

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—Interest payment on corporate bonds during August will total $125,414,275, Standard Statistics Co. reports. In addition several bonds to an aggregate of $7,917,500 will be paid off and the sum to be realized by owners of other bonds called during the month will be $18,068,000

Rubber Is Mixed

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—Rubber futures were irregular today. September, 9.60; December, 9.90; March, 10.30. New contracts: September, 9.72; December, 10.05, March, 10.53.

NEWS OF Trends of the Day MAJOR New York List MARKETS

Resistance to Bears Seen in Wall St. Transactions

New York, Aug. 13—The last hour saw better resistance to bear attacks offered in today's Wall St. trading. A good rally got under way in late dealings but did not proceed very far, although prices held within a point or tw oof the day's best for a number of the pivotal issues until near the close.

Weather uptour was staged.

Speculative interest and activity was practically at a standstill as the flow of both buying and selling orders from the outside dried up. The market thinned down to a narrow and professional affair, with the bulls and bears jockeying for position in a dozc nor more of the favorites.

UTILITIES ARE SOLD

The bears as usual sold United States Steel simultaneously with the appearance of the Iron Age's weekly survey, which offered little cheer and encouragement for investors in steel or other industrial shares.

Wall Street sold the utility stocks on the theory that the utilities would become the principal politics in the fall campaign and might suffer rate-paring as the result. The utility list as a whole is now in a new low level for the year, having penetrated under the June 24 bottom late in yesterday's session.

Electric Power & Light, American Power & Light and other active utilities bore the brunt of this selling, but thev olume was comparatively small.

The bears were chiefly concerned over the unwieldy character of their position resulting from the numerous explosive upturns caused by stampedes of overcrowded shorts in the past.

The morning decline carried prices off 1 to 3 points, reducing the general level to close to the bottom of June. The losses were fairly well balanced by early afternoon, and several shares showed advances of 1 to more than 3.

American Tobacco B, Warner Bros., Johns Manville, North American and Houston sold up 2 to 3 points.

Shares gaining a point or more included such issues as U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Radio, General Electric and General Motors.

During the morning, Bethlehem Steel, American Power & Light and J. I. Case sagged about 2 points to new 1930 lows, and Kennecott, Childs and Columbia Gas also recorded new bottom prices.

VOLUME IS UP

A tendency of trading volume to increase with a declining market and to turn dull on advances, was a reversal of recent form, and was discouraging to the cause of higher prices, as the day's business never again failed to indicate much but the usual continuance of the July slack into early August.

The weekly steel trade reviews again sounded a note that the Iron Age" placed operations for the entire industry at 52 per cent of capacity, a drop of 5 per cent, and another new low for the year. Its composite prices showed further declines.

The steel price was the lowest since February, 1922, and the pig iron price, since 1916. "Steel" said that some eff- - might be made to stiffen steel prices within a few weeks, but saw no developments to indicate an improve at in the colorless market, adding:

"In fact, such adverse factors as drought, a sluggish metal market for automobilists, surplus railroad equipment, and declining foreign trad-, are perhaps more accentuated."

CAR LOADINGS EASE

The weekly freight car loadings figures, covering the week ended Aug. 2, showed a negligible decline from the previous week, amounting to little more than 1000 cars, but the trend was contrary to the normal seasonal tendency, and the movement of freight theoretically held at the lowest level since 1922, although the growth in motor truck transport since then probably warps the comparison.

The statistics of stocks of refined copper were again a disappointment, showing another slight increase, despite the low price and curtailed operations. A member of the stock exchange remarked that it was a pity the surplus copper could not be fed to cattle in place of corn.

The weekly petroleum statistics alone provided a modicum of cheer. Gasoline stocks cut down 1,371,000 barrels to the lowest level since the beginning of the year. Averages daily crude output was reduced 31,350 barrels to the lowest level in recent years. The curtailment program has made sufficient headway to give the industry hope of more satisfactory prices.

COMMODITY PRICES

Commodity prices still showed considerable unsettlement. The cotton market again turned downward, the October position breaking below 12 cents a pound for the first time since 1915. The failure of the grain markets to make notable recovery on the government crop figures has also been discouraging.

Credit conditions remained about stationary, with call money again renewed at 2½ per cent, but available outside at 2 per cent.

The rally was considerably extended in the late dealings as short covering became more insistent.

Stocks like American Can, Johns Manville, Vanadium, American Corn Products, Gillette, North American, Houston Oil and Warner Brothers showed 3 to more than 4 points above the Tuesday close.

There were gains of a couple of points in U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Electric, American Power & Light, Curtis, Eastman Kodak, Sears Roebuck and Public Service of New Jersey.

Case, which with several others had touched new low ground on the morning decline, showed a net advance of more than 12 points.

The close was strong.

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

Until our morning mail arrived and was opened, we should have said, off-hand, that it was very unlikely there could possibly be any more stunts to do in the nature of endurance contests. It seemed to us the field of such publicity-seeking affairs was about covered. Pole and tree sitters, airplane and automobile endurance trials; dance and rocking chair contests, and numerous other feats as proof of stamina and wearing abilities.

But in the mail today appears a notice to the effect that out in Chicago a Silver-Marshall model 38A radio chassis (This is gratis advertising) has just been turned off after playing continuously at the company's main office for 3,317 hours, or one year, twenty-three days and five hours. There you are, folks, tie that one.

Following is a letter we received from one P. B. F., of East Boston. It is a sort of heavenly bit of literature and shows that Paul knows his dream-book:

Dear Bill—Whipple: Here's my conception of how Graham McNamee would sound, announcing us to sleep. Hope it may interest you:

"They're off! Gallant Fox leads the field by three lengths but the fighting gray is on the Red shell closes the gap. The score is now 10 Love and we are tied up on the 1st hole. Traffic very full. Lindbergh takes off for an exhibition and cinches the first chukker with the long-house breast stroke. Now Sharkey's right crosses to the jaw and takes a fall from the Purple goat at leader. The Green aster heads the ball and a speedy left wing sinks the puck to make the score 10 to 10. Now it's all even. What a contest! Lot of well known people here—there's the Duke of Kelsick entering—Ah! the contest continues. The Orange fencer takes up his rapier and—touch! He's got a touchdown. Orange kicks as their opponents come down the stretch in a cloud of exhaust smoke. The fray is ended. Bully Valles takes the ball from the Lavender floor-guard and the left outside is out at the 16th hole! The frames is ended, ladies and gentlemen."

There have been times when it seemed to us that our weekly stipend was of such small proportions, there was real danger of it becoming non-discernible in the large envelope which contained it. And then we would receive something smaller. It is the tiny electron, whose movement from filament to plate in a radio vacuum tube makes the radio set articulate.

Keith Henney, writing in Electronics," points out that these tiny projectiles are so small that the ratio between their mass and travel in a radio tube is equivalent, in comparison with the electron itself, to the ratio of the size of a baseball from the Yankee Stadium to the sun 90 miles away.

Bobby Burns once said something to the effect that if we could see ourselves as others see us there probably wouldn't be quite so many unsightly boils. Perhaps George Hicks, NBC announcer, is not afflicted that way but he's not at all backward to look himself over, having got himself caught in the movie news reels at the Edison scholarship awards, down in West Orange.

Though his voice may prove to be a detriment and his talk may be a flop, we will pay strictest attention to him tonight over the Coca Cola hour from WEEI at 10:30. We speak of the man who has done more for baseball than any other individual, Babe Ruth. He will be interviewed by Grantland Rice tonight, and if Hicks fills expectations he will divulge some of the secrets of his success.

Another inspiration for television performs before a telephone tonight on the California Melodies program at 11:30 over WNAC. Frances Halliday, who played in musical comedies before she overwhelmed the talkies, will sing some numbers from her coming picture, "Let's Go Native."

a good USED CAR is a worthy contestant in a modern endurance test.

GOOD used cars are constantly performing endurance tests . . . they are doing a great job of day-in and day-out transportation without any acclaim except by their owners. Their first owners often turn them in with but a small portion of their total mileage used. You, as the second owner, get the remaining thousands of miles, plus the beauty of design, plus speed and power originally built in by the maker for your dollars today than ever before.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

The Price of Milk

And Other Commodity Prices

The decision of some of the New England producers to withstand the temptation to boost the price of milk is a just one, but it is not more than the people had a right to expect.

Our economic conditions have gone awry, and Mother Nature has shuffled them until they now resemble a whirligig.

The bread manufacturers had undertaken a national campaign designed to stimulate the use of wheat. Eat more bread, they urged, because it will take an additional 100,000,000 bushels of wheat off the hands of the sorely-pressed farmers. Their spending power will be accelerated, and the wheels of industry will spin again. Also, the national government took in $250,000,000 worth of wheat for the same purposes.

The price of bread did not go down; nor did the spending power of the poor in the cities who need it most go up. The one thing that did move was the wheat market quotation, and that flopped like a wounded pheasant.

Here Mother Nature stepped in and shifted conditions in her strange way where the feeble hand of man and the resources of the national government had failed. She withered and burned the corn crops, and thus caused man to turn involuntarily to wheat as a substitute. Up went wheat.

A potato king of Aroostook who raises 75,000 bushels a year, said to this newspaper: "Things looked bad a month ago. Today, everything is different. The crop is big; the prices are right. The misfortune of our fellow farmer of the West was our good fortune. But this is no time to be soaking him or gouging the consumer. There is another day coming, and life has taught me that we reap about as much good as we sow in this world; no more or no less."

That is the Christian spirit, expressed in a simple, homely Yankee way. Economic conditions cannot be made more reliable by gouging prices of foodstuffs, any more than by slashing the wages of the workers. Both work to the same end. Man proposes, but God disposes, is what the Yankee potato king had in mind. Until the economic world becomes stable, all the remaining milk producers might well absorb his economic and religious philosophy and join with their colleagues in letting the price of milk stay where it is.

New Parking Rule

Public Patience Needed

The adaptability and patience of the people of Boston are again to be put to a severe trial.

First, the elaborate system of traffic lights was established in the heart of the city in the hope of eliminating congestion in the narrow streets and of relieving the common dangers to pedestrians and autoists as well. Their vexations are being steadily overcome. The test seems to be working with steadily increasing satisfaction. Improvements and changes will be made as their need becomes evident.

Now, by incentive of the mayor, parking soon is to be prohibited on the inbound arteries in the morning hours and on the outbound lanes during the afternoon rush period.

Obviously this experiment is to be promulgated by Mayor Curley, Police Commissioner Hultman, Traffic Commissioner Conry and other officials whose only interest in the matter can be to improve the public convenience.

We can, therefore, begin this innovation with them in the spirit of fullest co-operation and in the hope that by eliminating congestion it will promote safety and the ease and comfort of the several hundred thousand people who come daily to their places of business and to trade in the stores and mercantile establishments.

A New Career for Women

Architecture

One of the few remaining professions which women have not invaded to any great extent is architecture. There are, of course, several women architects. But not many.

That seems strange when you think of it—for woman's chief work throughout the ages has been that of homemaker, and homemaking is the primary business of architecture. Probably a majority of interior decorators are women, but architecture itself remains largely a masculine profession.

There are, however, signs of a change. Some firms are already employing girls along with men. Miss Eleanor Herron, a niece of the late Chief Justice Taft, is one of several young women now engaged in drawing plans for a new skyscraper in New York. Girl "draftsmen," their employers say, are as competent as anybody else, and it is only a question of time before they are relatively as numerous as stenographers.

Young women trying to decide on a "career" might well consider architecture. It is a profession requiring brains, tact, good taste and patience.

Men have no monopoly of those qualities.

PAVING THE WAY

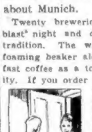
By Nelson Harding

"Hell is paved with good intentions"
Is an old familiar saying,
And the paving of this roadway
Leading to financial ruin
Is composed of wholly worthless
Stocks and shares bought by the victims
Of that meanest brand of sharper,
The stock racketeer and swindler.

McINTYRE ABROAD -:- By O. O. McIntyre

MUNICH — Statistics show beer is losing popularity over the Fatherland save in this gloriously colorful capital of Bavaria. Aristocratic Germans sip beer in private, but in public they drink only native wines. The slump is wrinkling brewers' brows. But there is no worry about Munich.

Twenty breweries, running full blast night and day, uphold the tradition. The waiter brings a foaming beaker along with breakfast coffee as a touch of hospitality. If you order a pitcher of ice water they accompany it with a pitcher of beer. I'm afraid to turn on both faucets.



Munich, being the easiest entrance to the Alps, is constantly besieged by visitors. Its transients exceed its 700,000 population. So, while animating, life is confusing. It seems, in the manner of a tourist hunting his grip, to dash around in hysterical circles.

Art is as highly developed, however, as beer. No other city can boast so many art students or bare-legged men in "shorts." The air has a nip, for the city is high above the sea. After nightfall in hottest months an overcoat is indispensable.

While my wife attended a "Wagner-Festspiele," I toured the beer cellars. They have names such as "Hofbrauhaus," "Löwenbraukeller" and other jaw-breakers. All are dark drinking places in a heavy oaken dignity, suggesting Luchow's in halycon days.

Everywhere I was told I should have been here on March 15. That is annual tap day for the celebrated Salvator beer from the "Paulaner brauerie" and I gather everybody gets pie-eyed. In mentioning it, the native pats his paunch, rolls his eyes and makes gurgling noises.

While most places are called cellars, many are outdoor gardens or large halls with vaulted roofs. The largest is the Munchener Kindlekeller occupying 26,000 square feet and seating 6000 or almost the population of Gallipolis, O., including our fashionable suburb Millcreek.

Cafes ring with the rhythm of the over-worked "Maine Stein Song." It gained the same overnight popularity here as in America.

In the Munchener Kindlekeller, a man a half dozen tables removed was a startling image of Will Rogers, even to chewing gum and unruly forelock. I sneaked over to cover his eyes—you know, "Guess who this is?" surprise! surprise! but whoever it was was rattling away in German so I tip-toed back again.

* * *

Munich is jammed with pilgrims to the passion play at Oberammergau. The spectacle has been a lifesaver for hotels this summer, bringing 250,000 tourists who might not otherwise have come over.

* * *

Munich has shady squares and wide promenades and is easy to explore. No matter where one strays, he or she can be guided back to the center of the city by two high towers of the celebrated Frauenkirche.

* * *

One should, I presume, remain in Munich several weeks to become saturated with its universities, its art—and perhaps its beer. But we must eat-hop away before the traveler's cheeks completely vanish. It has developed into a race with a disappearing purse and if my knee jerks hold out I expect to win with a left over five spot for the boat steward going home.

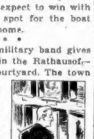
Every day a military band gives a noon concert in the Rathausof—the town hall courtyard. The town turns out rain or shine. Nowhere in Germany has such tremendous civic zeal as Munich. My guess is the band stimulates enthusiasm.



I have briefly peeped at the Residenz Museum. The English Garden, Old and New Pinakothek and dog trotted through one or two other art shrines but when other memories of Munich fade I shall recall a large, splashing fountain made entirely of sea shells. It was a huckleberry. O, yes I missed that statue of the little boy in Brussels.

That beer "puts on the lard" is settled in Munich. Waddling males and females, puffing like walruses, are everywhere. I mistook every other man for Big Bill Edwards.

H. G. Wells Writes

ON "THE SCIENCE OF LIFE"

BY TAKING segmenting fish or frogs' eggs and immersing them for a short time in various dilute poisons and narcotics, strange monsters can be produced, which lack the frontmost parts of the head. When as often happens, all the region in front of the eyes fail to develop, the two eyes appear united into one at the extreme front end—we have made a cyclops.

H. G. Wells

The explanation is simple. A high degree of activity is necessary for the elaborate headregion to develop. When the activity is reduced by drugging the egg it is insufficient to perform its task. What develop in the place of the head are those structures which demand a slightly lower level of activity for the formation. We get a face part confused, deflected and incomplete like the statement of a failing mind.

But if we can cut out the "high-level" organs by flattening the main activity-gradient, we ought to be able to encourage them by steepening it. Some recent experiments seem to indicate that this is so.

Strychnine and caffeine are stimulating drugs; and fish and frog eggs treated with them in early stages grow into embryos with abnormally large heads and abnormally small tail-regions.

Another method is to expose segmenting eggs to high temperature at one end, low at the other. When the future head, the region of, high activity, is cooled, its activity is depressed and rather small-headed tadpoles are the result; an visa versa. For the present we are confined to animals which lay their eggs free in the water.

This minute study of the developing egg throws suggestive light on the monsters which from time to time appear.

Everybody has heard of the four-legged ducks, the two-headed snakes, calves and tortoises that crop up at times even upon the best regulated countryside.

SEC. 2—THE NEW INDIVIDUAL SETTLES DOWN TO DEVELOPMENT.

Hitherto the embryo has been quite plastic material; fragments of it could reorganize themselves into wholes. But there now follows a stage in which the various parts of the egg have become specialized. They have been told off to play their several parts; this piece is to grow into a leg, that into a stomach, and so on. An invisible chemical determination has taken place. Each part is set in its own direction.

By ingenious experiments upon suitable creatures, biologists can remove small parts of the developing embryo and graft then on to others.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow)

Capital Silhouettes

By GEORGE R. BROWN

WHEN IT comes to breaking a drought we would rather see Jupiter Pluvius go into commission than nine little Governors.

* * *

WE HEAR from the preliminary Alabama rumbles that Senator Tom Heflin has made an impressive showing in his kleen-kut campaign.

* * *

WHAT DISCOURAGES the Republican politicians out in Nebraska is that once every six years George Norris changes his mind and decides that he will run for the Senate.

Cricket a Slow Game?

Not for the British

THE WORLD'S GREATEST CRICKETER

Americans waste valuable time feeling sorry for Britishers because they play cricket instead of baseball.

But the British know what they want, and, strange as it may seem to an American "fan," they detect skill, judgment, science, great power of endurance in a good cricketer, and they ADORE HIM, as this picture shows.

You see, with admirers grouped about him, the man who is probably the greatest cricketer in the world today. Underneath this picture the London Sphere writes:

> The twenty-one-year-old Don Bradman playing in the Test Match at Leeds on Friday not merely broke, with a score of 309 not out, the record of 287 set up by R. E. Foster (England) at Sydney in the 1903-4 tour, but went on to smash it on Saturday, when he compiled the staggering total of 334. On Friday he made his first century at the rate of a little over a run a minute—100 in 98 minutes. No wonder he got the ovation and awoke the wild enthusiasm indicated by this picture, showing the cricket wonder coming in after he had —at last—been bowled by Tate. No player of any age has ever shown a greater variety of strokes, a more confident mastery of any bowling, than this boy of twenty-one. The world of cricket salutes him!

To make 334 runs before being "bowled out" seems to us too much like "sweetness long drawn out."

And to make 334 runs must have taken at the very least 334 minutes—probably more than 400 minutes.

Think of watching the same player making runs for more than six hours. What would Babe Ruth think of that?

But there was deep philosophy in the remark of the old woman who said, as she kissed the cow, "Every one to his taste."

A cricket player who can keep batting runs for more than six hours straight is probably to the British what our flagpole sitters, tree sitters and other nuisances are to us.

Let us not criticise.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Have Ladies Lost Their Romantic Attractions?

HAVE LADIES lost their romantic attractions?

Is romance becoming impossible between modern men and women?

Count Keyserling, famous German philosopher, says they have and it is.

Elsie Robinson

"Love is tying on its deathbed . . . in Europe today, love has become openly unmodern . . . from now on love is to exist no longer . . . The boyish bob, the changed figure, the wearing of glasses, the destruction of all that is provocative of love by exposure to wind and weather, the sport-fury—all these are the external signs in the change of feminine structure . . . independent young women have caught the spirit of the age . . . and this brings with it the progressive atrophy of all the characteristics which define the woman as a love being . . ."

Don't agree with him? Well, you might as well, for he's right. There isn't a doubt that old-fashioned romance is doomed. For no modern girl with an ounce of gumption is going to cultivate the qualities which made ladies lovely to the boys of yesterday.

What were those qualities? Weak eyes, for one thing, according to Count Keyserling. And likewise weak spines. Why was the clinging vine so popular? Because she made any wayside weed look like a sturdy oak by comparison. Men didn't really respect the Clinging Vine. They were grateful to her for them. And it's but natural that gentlemen should prefer hoobies and resent the Regular Intelligence which makes them hustle.

"But the woman of yesterday wasn't always a booby!" No, but she was always a bankrupt, which, when it comes to getting your rights, amounts to the same thing. Why did Grandma stick by Grandpa regardless? Largely because if she didn't stick, she had no place to go. Such loyalty is economic, not romantic. But, of course, no complacent husband is going to acknowledge that!

Which, I repeat, was a marvelous arrangement for males. But you can't expect women to go on being bankrupts forever, just to gratify the Big Boys. Sooner or later, they were bound to find their way back to that free and fair estate which was once theirs—before someone persuaded females to get inferior and act romantic.

And now they're back. Regular citizens again! Human Beings once more as well as "Love Beings." Will they, can they, regard their men as their grandmothers did? No.

It is not possible for men and women to become equals and remain lovers in the old, romantic sense. But it is possible for them to love in a new and incomparably more honest and understanding sense. And I suspect that this is actually the first real love that men and women have ever experienced.

It isn't as decorative as the old romantic masquerade. It won't stand for as much nonsense—for it doesn't have to. It will be much more demanding of real action—and if love does not show results it's apt to bolt. But it will be the most honest and civilized relationship that the human race has ever attempted. And one hour of such free, self-respecting companionship will do more for human development than an aeon of la-de-la.

Words of the Wise

For when the power of imparting joy

Whose steep descent in lost perdition ends.
